

ROBERT SHAKA'S POLITICAL NARRATIVE!

This work; a series of short and long articles about Uganda's political landscape was picked over a long time from a one Robert Shaka's facebook Page before the facebook shutdown. He had allowed me to publish it, but for personal and political reasons , I abdicated my duty. It contains quite a lot of information because, I came to learn that this guy participated in the Luwero war as a toddler!!

Take time and read through because I feel that time is ripe now for certain facts to be laid bare!!!!

When I left Makerere University in the fall of 2000, I was immediately hired to go provide technical support to epidemiologists conducting research in Tororo.

My Boss asked me if I was ready to report to Tororo from my base station in Entebbe. Young and hungry to prove something, I politely asked if I could go home pick up my small bag. I was ready even that very day.

I made my first trip to Tororo town in April, 2001 having been asked if I was ready around January. It was a quiet town in the rainy season.

It did not take long before I settled among the people of Tororo. I was fed by them for 10 years deep in Osukuru. I drunk their water every visit I made to Kwapa or Mulanda. And the wonderful people of Mukujju on Mbale road and their maize.

In those 10 years I grew up into a man most people will not easily understand for I confirmed many perspectives of life. Hidden away from Kampala for 10 years many people thought I was no longer in the country. But I was deeply embedded among the people of Tororo.

I traversed Eastern Uganda; Budaka, Busia, Palisa, Butaleja, KUMI, Mpale and Soroti. The scars of life were written on the faces of smiling people. I was a Rotarian trying to pay

Army Spokesman Lt.Col.Paddy Ankunda "Gen.Tumukunde was kissed by a tear gas canister on his leg".

Gen.Tumukunde "I am a General and I know the difference between a bullet and a tear gas canister".

They all are close to the center of gravity of the dictatorship either through political marriages, geography or sheer luck and they are not happy with each other. Now they are coaching suspects to accuse each other of killing one of their own progenies.

Anyway, mwesotinge or call us for help. But one way of the other, the intrigue will eventually wear everyone down.

Gen.Wamala of the famous "expendables" goes like "What was a General doing at youth MP elections?"

But but Col.Bright Rwamirama now is with his son in Parliament and sits in cabinet with his son's opponent's father.

And their Boss sits with his wife in the same cabinet while chairing his military outfit with his son and brother in tow.

There is something humbling about the KNOWN UNKNOWNs of death; to which each one of us will submit one day. Death humbles those disillusioned with power for in its ruthlessness we are unprepared for the cruelty with which it exposes the futility of our self importance among fellow men.

Death never gives us time to prepare by seeking forgiveness from those we have wronged because in testing fate we always hope we have more time. Our pride holds us back away from reality. We feel burdened by the thought of saying sorry to those whose land we have grabbed and orphans impoverished by our sheer thirst for conquest.

As our body wears down we still hope we have more time to seek forgiveness from those we have wronged as the last beautiful piece of work on our comfortable death bed. But death never tells you WHERE it will pick you from. We all hope it will be in a hospital surrounded by the best life mechanics and not through an assassin's rain of bullets or grizzly accident along Masaka.

Instead death just pounces on us like an eagle snatching a chick from the ground in a flash. Those we leave behind wail in the dust for the fear of the unknown.

The TIME when the brutal hand of death will come home to pick each one of us in turns is what seems to be the only genuine "political" queue of life.

Why then is man so mean to himself and those in his neighborhood? Why is man so deluded so often by his material possessions, power of conquest of other men and their territory?

As the sun pounds my aging frame, I am humbled by each and every blow my body has absorbed over the years and still given me a chance to stand up and walk.

I am grateful to my mother who went home on this day for giving me a chance to live my own experience.

I have lived my life.

I was once assigned to a 69 year old mentor with many years of IT governance on his back. He spoke of 39 years working on Mainframes and Linux/Unix systems way back in the days.

Initially I was skeptical when he was introduced as a retired veteran coming back to keep his mind busy. My judgement of this fellow was purely about his age and frail frame. He had hearing aids because his hearing was impaired. Deep in my psyche, was like old Mainframe amigo. Who uses Mainframes anymore? Of course Government.

Being me, I always spoke to him in a low tone out of respect for elders. He struggled to hear and asked me to speak up quite often until I picked up.

We went to the real business. I was the mentee and he the mentor. We drew up projects to work on. We mobilized resources, made contacts with customers, set milestone targets, schedules for product delivery name everything up to reporting. I must confess, don't ever underestimate people. Don't ever over estimate your experience. There are old people who are a moving encyclopedia and could easily make you feel a moving pamphlet.

There are people who know stuff my friends. Some people actually make things we often take for granted happen in the background.

After one month under this gentleman's wing; I was assigned to a 29 year old Korean-American fellow who had worked with Grant Thornton as an IT Auditor for 5 years then. He was a pro at his stuff. He is a genius complete with a big head on top of his shoulders.

Of course these are very old experiences almost 10 years old. But I learnt in those couple of months in 2005 that amidst all the noise and heckling we make are people who know their stuff and you have to want to learn from the "experts" when they have to tell you what they know in their field.

The 69 year old retired gentleman and the 29 year fellow humbled and helped me discover my knowledge gaps before my retirement.

Don't underestimate young and old professionals who have honed their skills and knowledge in their field of expertise. Just use them as knowledge workers to transfer that knowledge to others than killing them.

I too can now mentor some people I swear.

But seriously, why does Uganda need a Parliament of 450 people or a cabinet of 80 Ministers?

What economic rationale justifies this wastage in a poor country?

It is like an excited "middle income" family in a one roomed house in Kawempe or Bugolobi hiring 30 house girls and 12 drivers to take care of their two little children.

Some things just don't make any economic sense.

Who does this kind of hemorrhage to a poor country and all the people can't see how bad this is going to get?

When you resign a small docket because you can't fit well on the small chair, the political employer is not sure of your intentions or motivation, the next trick is to continue sending you $400 on your account.

Some employers cannot imagine someone can resign a job of $400 or $2,000 a month. To them you are their 'prisoner' for life and you must worship the Bishop not his God.

How then can he resign? They ask in bewilderment. Is that man smoking something dangerous? Just like that! It must be the imperialists. He is up to something, they corrupted our man. He is in bed with the "opposition". They go on and on.

Then the plot begins. Send this ka-money, the small demon in him might wake up and we shall catch him from there. Even if he eats just one pay check that lands on the account. Ignore and watch him for the next couple of months. One pay check eaten and we can recall him back to continue "tweeting" forus or send him to jail like if he become a headache. How can he just resign when we set up computers for him to social media work? Eiiiiish!!!

This is how we used to trap guinea fowls and antelopes back in the days. You ask the oldman from Kabulasoke. To these people anyone with any sense of integrity must either be soiled, enticed to join to the monkey dance or be "poisoned" if it must come to that. You don't resign from the cult.

The teachers, drivers, the parents, the students, the security guards, the police officers all knew but were "prisoners" of poverty to speak out.

In fact our much touted cocktail of "intelligence agencies" knew about this and approved of it since it was by a big man.

Those saying the school was for the "rich" are equally deluded. Who are the "rich" parents who left their daughters to their wealthy fellow pest then?

See the poor celebrate in awe when one of their own suddenly flashes money on the table. They glorify those with money and accept abuse from the rich because they are prisoners of "poverty" and do little to push back. If the rich wants to crack some poor skull he will call on poor police man or soldier or poor rasical in the neighborhood.

The poor are hired by the rich to become the poor police man, poor journalist, the poor soldier, the poor teacher, the poor security guard, the poor gardener, the poor father of a poor younger mother, the poor driver, the poor Boda Boda, even the poor bank teller, name all of them.

UNTIL the poor learn to tap into their collective numerical superiority and challenge the their "prison" walls and push back and demand a society under which they can be treated fairly under the law, they have everything to lose. No rich person is willing to save the poor girl from a rich predator. The law is the walking stick of the political elite.

TENANTI TENANTI you are going to dig deeper into their pockets to pay rent. See, Ekyapa Mungalo? Targets land tenants or squatters. The tenant is an endangered species. The tax motive is to encourage you to build your own nest. If you can't pay rent then the law makers are saying you should NOT:

- a) Own a private car
- b) Live in luxury

It is an incentive for you to build your own. When you are done and everyone owns a home of their own and there are no more tenants then a law will pass that everyone pays property tax.

For now it is you the tenant to pay tax because those who sleep in their own homes are not going to be paying until you go to your home.

Remember, all stolen public money is right in those very properties you rent. This is the only way to teach you to stop the thieves from stealing, put up rentals for you as you drink your burdens away only to wake up and pay more taxes. It is a cyclical fundamental shift.

Now to put up a decent home you will need something like UGX200M approximately $60,000. See? You need to save this one my friend and you need to create space to save this one.

The only way we can catch the thieves though who are supposed to catch themselves since they are in th police, army and intelligence is to have a property tax that is indiscriminate. In other words, it harvests "the good, the bad and the ugly".

Before then, you are going to pay the tax man.
Thank you

Arab countries that depend on OIL are stressed economically as a unit remains way below the $120 a barrel price before it plummeted to around $35. Each country including Venezuela has been looking for an external excuse for not being able to supply bread to its citizens. The Russians want a barrel back to atleast $80 or $120 like back in the days of the boom that led to their annexation of Crimea and invasion of Ukraine. The unit fell right after those imperial events. A war in the Gulf is therefore in the interest of the OPEC cartel and some speculators.

It disrupts the global oil supply chain and out put and by default creates scarcity pushing the unit price up. An Arab war involving countries for or again Qatar will impact the global supply chain for much needed hydro carbons pushing the price of a barrel oil back up.

The Russians, Saudis, Qataris, Iranians, Nigerians, Venezuela, Angola and a cocktail of other prospective producers benefit from high unit prices of oil on the international market.

So as we brace for a possible Arab war we must understand why this is a good excuse to create real oil supply problems and the motivation of the players.

Uganda's 2017/2018 budget has $745M for interest(NOT principle) payments on accumulated loans acquired.

Current public debt stands at $10.5BN and projected to grow to $30BN by 2030 at the current appetite of picking loans even from sharks.

Let me tell you. You don't borrow for infrastructure investments because Kenya has borrowed and launched an SGR or that Rwanda is acquiring more Aircrafts for her airline. You don't buy a car simply because your neighbor has bought a Lorry. That definition of competition is called adolescence peer pressure.

Let's not panic over lost opportunities. Those are gone and we need more sobriety to invest our meager economic resources in areas that will optimize utility and spur production. The key to industrialization of the economy is driving up efficiency through strategic energy investments and cost containment in the public sector where corruption has become norm.

Unfortunately, Museveni, his progeny, his friends like Abiriga & Co have no idea how to run a modern economy. Absolutely no clue reason he needs a Parliament of 450 peasants to make laws at an annual cost of more than $150M.

By 2030, Uganda's population will be more than 55million and no industrialization in sight because the current infrastructure drive is motivated by panic and peer pressure.

Dreaming without the discipline and concerted effort to transform your hopes into reality is wasted energy. Dreams are transformed by a hunger for ambition that does not give into self pity.

The new mantra across Africa is about how young people MUST dream big and that is half the story. They must go beyond dreaming and question everything in their environment for answers from which they must derive optimum solutions to their current problems.

Let me say this. You won't succeed in life by luck or praying yourself to success. You will instead have to successfully finish your school program without excuses and pursue a career either professionally or business. There is no easy path for any these. It is going to be tough and rough sometimes seemingly leading no where for you to be able to beat the competition around you for the few opportunities. You will have to look beyond barriers and create your own opportunity. You will have to stand up and break your own barriers to your dreams. You don't have many barrier breakers around you. You will have to get your butt off the stool and get your hands dirty.

Now that am not young or youth I will share something.

The most stressful reality for any parent today is working hard, raising children, educating them and they can't mature and gain their economic independence and leave home to go start their own lives. Children at 35 or 40 are still living with their parents for lack of work and need pocket money for data bundles. The dreams of parents is to see their children succeed in life and the reality today is that some of these dreams are dying quietly with the dreamers.

There are many regrets along the way. As we grow old we remember all the missed opportunities and wonder if things would be different if we had pushed harder, saved more, invested our savings and demanded more from our own selves.

For a country that has many young people the parents of this young nation would be the politicians. All the missed opportunities will catch up with all us in future as regrets or failed dreams we had no actions for. The things we ought to have done and did not do but the things we did that we ought not to have done.

To you my young friends; you don't have all the time in the World. Do what you are supposed to do at every stage of your life and push yourself harder without feeling sorry for oneself. It will always be hard but lighter if you perfect your discipline to achieve results for every effort.

Indicators of Economic Distress.

1. Tendency or temptation to seek for economic solutions from traditional spiritual intercessors.
 2. Tendency or temptation to abuse alcohol or drugs
 3. Upsurge of fake religiosity in the population
 4. A spectrum of acute sexual exploitation and prostitution
- The fourth one I will explain. It is not easy to know if one is engaged in one form of prostitution or another because those engaged in it conceal the monetary or material motivation behind it.

Here is the spanner in the works. The moment one exchanges sex for a material reward, monetary or a job that individual has engaged in prostitution thus the spectrum. Now you can go ask how many have engaged in prostitution in the distressed economy.

Knowing your situation and accepting its realities is the first step in elisting a range of possible options and the most efficient solution that optimizes outcomes for the change we all aspire for.

It is not a weakness to accept the reality of poverty in ones eco-system. It is not out of weakness that we MUST collectively admit that poverty is a national problem of malignant proportions. It is not a weakness that we MUST admit unemployment is a major major cross cutting problem and urgent danger to our people. Unemployment and poverty have no political party, tribe or religion.

The moment we all agree on our realities and the strategic bottlenecks, people must find motivation to negotiate from different political, religious and cultural persuasions on areas of cooperation on the necessary collective effort to alleviate poverty and take people to work.

We all seem to be distracted by our extreme right to lead against those we perceive to be our adversaries. But no single political, cultural or religious group has all the answers to all national economic and political problems. We need to build strategic alliances and sustain them over the medium and the long term to help solve some of these problems.

Those who think they have every exclusive right to offer solutions without the need to negotiate for the cooperation of others are deluding themselves by underestimating the burden before all of us.

The odds against a black African man or woman both with in Africa and around the world are surmountable but requires discipline, hard work and expanding our horizons.

So 85% youth UNEMPLOYMENT is no longer news. Is having no job now okay for young people in Uganda? Instead of quarreling for industrial wages we are now embroiled in Tuk Tuk fights.

What happened to the promise of an industrial, private sector led self propelling economy in 1986? The poor youth of 32 years ago today wake up aged 62 and can't even fathom how fast time flew away sooo fast? Those who made the promise still wish its was still 1990. They don't wana go and still want to make more empty promises.

When we came to Kampala in 1986, we found people in Kampala, Kawempe, Nabbingo and Kayunga who gave us clothes to wear since ours were all torn. They also gave us food to eat. Those we found in Kampala are now poor and those who came from the bush have some little money. We did not have cows. But the Itesots who had cows now are cassava growers while we have the cows. We did not have land but now own square miles of land.

If we don't have factories producing goods, consulting firms providing superior services, where do we get the money to acquire cows, square miles of land with all these wailing peasants whose land has been grabbed if we have paid them?

It is reverse economics. Either we took what belonged to the people or our businesses produced superior goods and services. But where are the factories?

The questions is how do we get used to NRM's politics of corruption as normal and adopt youth UNEMPLOYMENT as normal as well?

Every couple of years NRM has come up of either with the NRM 10-Point Program, National Development Plans(1), (2) (3)(n) but at no time do they come up to account for any results. Even the the constituent programs like NUSAF, PRDP, NAADS, OWC are all designed with FAILURE as the principle objective.

Read my lips; Mr.Museveni is vending fantasy and buying time just in case but the man knows the Uganda politico-Economic problem was all along harder paper than he under estimated. NRM, Museveni and any of its cronies have no solutions to Ugandans economic problems but they are part and parcel of the problem escalation. They can't fix the economy and we must admit it that are occupiers rather than solution developers.

But with all this known still NRM has refused to own its ACTUAL deliverables against the PLANNED industrial economy promised in 32 years ago.

- 1) Rural Poverty
- 2)Urban Poverty

- 3) National Debt $10.5BN(Where did all this money go since 2006)
 - 4) Unemployment
 - 5) Corruption
 - 6) Land grabbing
 - 7) Family rule
 - 8) Tuk Tuk or Boda Boda Economy
 - 9) Kasese massacre
 - 10) Low wages of the few working people
 - (11)High taxes on the few poor working people(bambi balabye bano)
 - (12) Expensive low quality education

Everyday I find myself watching human behavior either in a taxi, restaurant, a bus and am amazed by the lack of restraint by people.

You speak loud on phone. You are close to a friend with whom you are having conversation but you want to be loud so every one listens in to your story. Meanwhile other people are trying to avoid(restraining) asking you why you must not tone down.

I know am very conservative on certain things. But we cannot get the attention of the world by shouting at everyone. I have sat on a bus where while others are reading book quietly, some people are literary saying "why are you reading book when am a rake? Listen to me, look at me, I have tattoos, a ring in my nose".

And the culprits? You know them. The young man and woman need to calm down and avoid distractions for they are so many.

Stop trying to seek attention and instead work so hard so attention can look for you just for your achievements. If everyone is reading a book on a long bus trip, why do you not like books? Why do you want to behave so differently by making noise for those reading a book on the bus for example?

By the way, I no longer read books. I look through the window observing the living conditions of Africa's poor, the efforts of others to live better lives, young pupils walking to school and my heart softens in awe.

Kabulasoke Mzee tells young people to focus

Maverick Blutaski

June 23, 2017 •

All my life I have been a keen observer of the moving parts of life and I was able to audit my own early enough to figure out the missing piece of the puzzle.

As young people struggle to find work to do they also face the distractions of youthful energy & the temptation for exploration.

Young people rightly want to live their lives. In circumstances where a young man or woman is still trying to find their true identity it is hard to tell them not to overly celebrate every small milestone including the protruding pubic hair there or a beard on their chin.

I have looked through photos of my friends in 1986 and it is difficult to quite understand how just 32 years can see someone transform from the handsome or beautiful young man or woman that was 32 years ago. Those who were 29 years when they became Army Commanders, Generals or Ministers are effectively 61+ years and it is evident on the wear and tear of their physical frames. And that is where everyone is heading. Thank you.

When I go to Nalongo's bar to take some tea, I meet my fellow elders with whom we compare notes. The shattered dreams of their youth are unimaginable. Some wish they had completed school. Others reckon how they lost all their animals to "foot and mouth disease". Other rant endlessly how their land was sold on the cheap. Significant is how much most of them looked up to their children as their life insurance policy that has just failed to take off as most of them become Boda Boda riders without passengers after selling off their land.

At 42, I am like how does a 62 or 70 year old navigate life in poverty? How does a 70 year old poor man and woman look on as their grand children inherit the poverty of their ancestors generation after generation? It is a paradox. I have been conscious about some of these economic indicators and am like what exactly happened?

The 70 year old generation winding down in poverty looking into the eyes of their 50 year old sons and daughters heading the same direction and the grandchildren in their 30s just can't figure it out how bad it's gona hit them with their little 4th generation toddlers with no social support system to talk home about.

Poverty is worse in old age. It is evident on crest fallen faces. I have tried over the years to share some insights into how I look at life with friends and it is difficult to fathom how generation after generation of people are distracted from confronting the strategic challenge of breaking the cycle of poverty.

As the sun beats my frame, I smile for Africa. It is going to get harder now that we are razing down villages without factories as people choose to fence off square miles of land. May the young African humble himself/herself for in him/her the future can be transformed and the cycle of poverty and despair broken.

We struggle too much to prove to ourselves and others how much and what we already know because our natural bias demotivates us from opening up to new ways of doing better what we already know holding us at cross roads. During the press conference to announce NOKIA being acquired by Microsoft for $7.1Bn in 2013, former Nokia CEO Stephen Elop ended his speech with his management team in tears saying this “WE DID NOT DO ANYTHING WRONG, BUT WE STILL LOST”.

Nokia dominated the global mobile telecom industry before Research In Motion brought the BlackBerry, Apple brought the iPhone and Samsung and others brought a cocktail of smart phones in a very short span of product life cycles. In a LinkedIn blog post by Ziyad Jawabra, he notes that while Nokia technically did nothing wrong, it was their refusal to change and learn new things that ultimately lead to the demise of companies and to a macro level nation economies.

Jawabra wrote:

“They missed out on learning, they missed out on changing, and thus they lost the opportunity at hand to make it big. Not only did they miss the opportunity to earn big money and grow big, they lost their chance of survival.”

Even with these, some people still think they don't know and can't publicly admit it but also think no one else does.

The problem with routine daily distractions is they take away resources that would be useful for contingency planning. There are always going to be emergency situations that require you have prepared for way before they happen. But do we?

While not many can afford health or life insurance, a well functioning hospital within reach should be part of every citizen's contingency plan.

Of course you must be asking why when you are healthy. Each one of us will one day find themselves either on a hospital bed if we are lucky to have one in our reach or afford one in order to save our lives from the brutal hand of death or just lying helplessly in their house or by the road side until eventually death wins anyway.

The reason health care is not paid attention to in Uganda or S.Sudan is because most are perennially in perpetual emergency mode to think about a contingency plan. The leaders are perpetually in "fire fighting mode" constantly lighting this fire and working over time to extinguish it to create a semblance of relevancy.

How else does one explain the clamor for igniting a debate on dress code or age limit when there is famine everywhere or ailing health systems across the country?

This year alone has seen many prominent people succumb to cancer and all tribes of medical conditions some of which could have been managed if appropriate allocation of resources was prioritized.

There will come a time for each one of us to put in our time on a hospital bed whether in London, Kamukoli or Mulago. The guy planning to go London for surgery will need $120,000 approximately 400M/- for a 3 weeks stay in a hospital due to a brain tumor surgery that could have been handled by a well equipped Mulago Hospital for far less in addition to benefiting others.

Even those banking on a foreign medical evacuation from their government connections are not guaranteed. We have seen many return from Nairobi or London in a casket because we are taken when the medical condition is acute and in advanced stages because our health care system can not manage these well given the very ailing condition of our health care system.

I am writing this out of duty and patriotism that we all take pose and reflect. There is a problem that must summon our collective consciousness to deal with.

Go to Mulago hospital and take a tour and see what awaits you, your son, daughter, wife or mother and you will know why all life matters. It is painful and tough for people but we all have a stake to have things right in our communities and country. No one is going to do it if you don't play your part to demand for it and also put in your fair share of responsibility.

In "good" times zebras or antelopes herd together. Lions too hunt together. There is always a sense of security herding or hunting in groups. Humans too herd together through drinking in social groups, they bury their dead in herds and still contribute for social functions such as weddings and kwanjula. Think of good times as a pack of lions hunting together to bring down one of the antelopes from the dispersing herd from a water source. Those who studied ecology understand what am talking about already.

When adversity strikes though, members of the herd run hard and suddenly adversity isolates the weakest in the herd as the rest of the members of the herd thrust hard to avoid being the victim. Think of adversity as prey being hunted down by predator. Think of adversity as a major disease or loss of a job for a long time.

This is the law of natural selection. Nature selects the strong to survive and the weak to die if they can't push hard to survive.

It is easy for friends to have social drinks together and buy each other alcohol to death in a merry making frenzy but not when adversity strikes. People will also come and contribute for a wedding because they too hope when their day comes others will come and throw their weight behind them. It is group security at a higher level of social animals.

But like an isolated antelope with a broken limb or weakened lungs after a crazy chase from a pack of lions, if you fall victim to a long illness for instance, lose a job for a long period of time or adversity that disables one from the "herd", the herd continues on its run away from adversity that has crippled down one of its own.

People or friends don't stay if ones illness goes beyond 4 weeks into months, a year and worse if it lasts a decade.

"Friends" don't want people with long term problems because adversity is always lurking in the wings for everybody. People want to be around for things they believe others will be around for them too.

They will attend your wedding because deep in their psyche those around should attend theirs as well but there is also the immediate social benefit of eating the good food of course for which they contributed anyway. They will however not pay your medical bills for your decade long illness or for your child. They will not pay your bills because you lost your job 4 years ago. They will not visit you on your sick bed you have been lying on and on for 5 years. Worse if you die, they will forget you even existed if some of them have not grabbed your land or property left behind for your poor children. Whose land do you think is being grabbed from peasants these days?

Hello, everyone is always on the run & the group social drinks are just a temporary cool off moment from the real our realities which some people mistakenly think of as routine.

What am I saying? Don't over rate friendship or group security. In the heat of the moment, when adversity isolates you from a group which often happens, the group of friends will scatter and you remain on your own to face your own reality.

If your economic well being is guaranteed exclusively by your silence against political corruption then you are an accomplice.

The Church in Uganda is an accomplice to our political decay. Church Leaders are in a symbiotic relationship of mutual perpetuation with the dictatorship. The same applies to donors and diplomatic missions whose interest is just to vend donor money and dirty loans.

Now you know why I don't listen to church men hiding inside overflowing robes in tall Cathedrals even on Wednesday.

On a serious note; don't put the following on your resume:

1. Date of Birth
2. Tribe
3. Marital status
4. District or village

At this point all this personal information might turn out to be background noise to what the recruiter and the hiring manager are looking for. Just do your best to understand the solicitation and tailor your resume adequately.

The Hiring Manager is not looking for your personal details. That is the work of the HR department at a much later stage for a different purpose all together. This information will be obtained by HR when doing your background check when hired.

The resume is about matching your skills set, knowledge and experience to the job description which should help the recruiter pick your resume out of the pack so you can walk to the Hiring Manager for a conversation to make your pitch why you are the most suitable for the job.

Former Uganda Confidential Editor Teddy Cheye was accused of "diverting" a $30,000 kitty from Global Fund and was handed a 10 year sentence in Luzira.

Robert Shaka did absolutely NOTHING and was ABDUCTED to SIU by eight adult armed non unformed idlers, fictiously accused by fake security hangers-on of aggravated robbery, placed on a NO-FLY LIST, passport seized by the same village goons and eventually sent to Luzira to cool off near the swamp.

Alice Kaboyo was accused of fiddling $70,000 of Global Funds and her sentence was to refund 20M/- and join a team to China negotiate the SGR with Rwabwogo.

Capt.Mukula had his money mixed up with Jim Muhwezi, Janet Museveni Global Fund tomatoes and he also had a tour of Luzira before being retired politically in public interest.

Former VP.Gilbert Bukenya was sent to Luzira over CHOGM accusations that were not clear and he cried like a baby how he had been betrayed by his leader before being retired politically in Kakiiri. By the way Gilbert Bukenya was the man who launched the Removal of Presidential Term Limits in 2003 while on his Upland Project in Fort Portal.

Dr.Sulaiman Kigundu was 6 months in jail and never recovered from his illness from Luzira.

Sudir is being accused by his former worshippers and friends that he took just a little $100M of depositors money and the man is puffing his Cigar.

So the World Bank withholds $1.5Bn for roads for almost 3 years causing stress in Kampala. Delegation after another head to Washington to negotiate the release of the financial oxygen.

AND the World Bank finally accepts to open the loan taps coinciding with the "cannibalization" of Crane Bank together with the National Bank of Commerce inside its belly by DFCU.

All indications show Sudir has been under the highest political protection for all his business life in Kampala. He has access to the Occupier of State House in his neighborhood, his office was almost opposite the Central Bank which supervised him and his Bank all this time and signed off clean audit attestations year after year that all was clear.

How then did all go wrong? Where are all the audit reports from the audit firms in Kampala and Bank of Uganda? Who signed off on all these? Lots of people and audit firms should either be under investigation or jail by now. If I were Sudir I would be like which kind of people are these who either my money or inept at anything in life.

Turns out the World Bank put pressure on our NRM government to reign in on years of financial crime. Why would officials of Bank of Uganda not take accountability for failure to do their work?

Sudir either pledged or gave NRM atleast $1M in every political campaign. When NRM organized a fete to fundraise for a building that never was, a cocktail of businesses most of them Chinese were sent letters soliciting for political donations. Sudir was high up there.

How did they expect to ensure compliance when they are financed by those who they are supposed to regulate?

As for journalists who were on the pay roll from the "Big man" it was nice doing business.

The solution is firewalling regulators by strengthening institutions. Of course these people are not wired to follow the law.

To the young parent and teachers, teach children to ask: 1) Why & 2) How

A friend recently told me that when they were growing up their father always asked each one of them to talk about themselves. Technically, he was teaching them how to sell themselves. Is not this what we always do?

If you are a learner and you have not mastered the import of the above boldly, you should be afraid.

There is a media report that Airtel has shipped off some IT Engineering jobs back to India. With more than 15 years experience, I will volunteer to share my insights about the impact of "Cloud Computing" on the global labor market.

1) Every organization is constantly reviewing its capital and operational expenditure on IT to ensure resource optimization.

2) Organizational cultures are shifting due to a mix of factors including regulatory compliance requirements, renewed focus on security and the short technology product life cycle.

Background.

Every organization that had some money in the 1990s bought a couple of computer boxes; workstations, servers and data circuits and hired IT Technicians or Engineers to keep their IT environment running. As organizations grew, more and more computing power was needed and as equipment aged, newer computer hardware CPUs were shipped in & vendors like Microsoft released newer version of their variant operating systems for upgrades and migrations and this has been an environment of constant and rapid change for the busy IT Engineer.

What many Engineers and IT Advisors or Directors paid little attention to though for a long time was the impact of cloud computing and data virtualization on the global labor market and how organizations would be impacted.

The "Cloud" as many called it was and remains an "elephant" in the sky because humans often slug about change. But the innovators of the "Cloud" knew where the future of demand was going to be and invested in massive infrastructure across the globe to provide a service they offer today.

Then BOOM came the "Cloud first" policy in some government quarters because Cloud providers had not only matured but provided real computing virtual capacity as PaaS, IaaS, IaaS and many other versions of services. CIOs were put under pressure to re-think their IT Strategy outside the computing boxes lying around their offices and re-configure their operations with lots of consolidation projects to do.

The consequence has been massive migration of segments of their operations into the cloud. Why would an organization whose network spans more than 100 Countries have a mail server box in its data center if mail can be migrated to the Google Cloud for instance?

Let me explain the example just above. A Microsoft Exchange server requires solid experience to run and manage. If an organization has offices in 100 countries it would need to hire more than 400 IT Engineers to maintain 300 server boxes in their local data centers, licenses, patching of the Operating system and the Total Cost of Ownership is way up relative to a Google Cloud Email system which by the way preserves your enterprise identity and meets security requirements unless your email is a highly classified.

So the moment the CIO signs off the Cloud migration project, on completion the Engineers who have been sitting on servers boxes inside their nice looking data centers on Wampewo avenue are technically rendered redundant and cannot continue on the pay roll. Next is a termination letter. Microsoft shifted from being an exclusive mass producer of software and extended to Cloud Services as well like IBM, Google and many others in different niches. Technically, they ventured into building massive regional data centers, which offer High Availability(HA) with virtual servers ready to spin off depending on various needs of organizations.

Microsoft or Google could have one Data Center on the East Coast and another in the West Coast for US customers, one in India, another in Australia for Asia and two in Europe all synchronized over a web of super gigabit links between them to ensure customer data availability and for a much smaller cost than maintenance of ones own server blades on-premise.

With these giants selling space(virtual servers or subscriptions) to organizations for computing power in their data centers rather than server blades for local data centers, the IT Engineer in Kampala will need to find a job in Google or Microsoft to find some form of stability.

What this means is that CIOs & Business Leaders have an option to review their IT and align it to the business strategy. The cost-benefit analyses constantly demonstrate that traditional computing has been disrupted and the labor market too.

In summary, train not for the local but global market. Understand the industry by constantly engaging and learning trends in the tech industry. The jobs are there but may not be in FortPortal or GULU but in Cairo or Nairobi. So you should be able to send your resume to Microsoft in Nairobi or Johannesburg and get a slot for an interview. Yes, Microsoft has opened offices in Kampala, Abuja, Johannesburg, Nairobi just like Google or IBM. The reason many IT Engineers don't know is because they are "busy". The reason those who know don't care is because they don't know why Microsoft and IBM have operations in Kampala or why Ericsson has operations in Kigali and Kampala.

Let me tell you young people. The alcohol you are drowning yourself in every day only gives you temporary reprieve from the real life challenges you face today and in the strategic future.

The reason the government does not regulate alcohol consumption is to keep you perpetually under the influence so they can freely do their business without your interruption.

The security guard who refused them from entering my house has been arrested for doing his work. I have no police sermon I have disobeyed. You want to search my home without a search warrant, when am not at home, a guard and a maid tell you it's not only improper but illegal then you arrest the guard for correcting your crooked procedures.

The last time I checked the same police(7 of them in plain clothes armed with AK-47s) driving an IPSUM), knew my home very well but instead chose to ABDUCT me at 5.30AM on June 8th 2015, 700 meters away from the same home they had searched 3 months earlier and found no iorta of evidence of crime.

What does a Police which has no history of following the law want in my home when I have gone to work?

The problem of Uganda is functional illiteracy among the political elite. The educated lot own no property except the few land grabbers. The illiterate peasant who owns some small piece of land is poor and can't read and write. The politician is suffering from economic constipation. The so called Honourable on parliamentary avenue is a vendor of people's lives. Everyone is a politico-economic speculator.

So, hypothetically, I come to Parliament or the Local Government people with over size suits recently seen in Nambole throwing bottles at an over sized Minister, and I propose that you pass a Constitutional Amendment with so many smuggled in fake deals in exchange for $50,000(approximately 200M/-).

The mention of money to a poor soul is like marijuana to a drug addict.

In the calculation of the ordinary member of Parliament, 30% will help stave off the bank or loan shark formerly at Crane Bank who wanted to seize your property. Then you will use 80M/= to acquire a prime plot of land in Kyanja or Kulambiro near former AIGP Andrew Felix Kaweesi's home. How much is left again? UGX60M.

By this time you have already voted for AGE LIMIT removal and the the seizure of your property out of delusional excitement. Then you go shopping around for your wife car in Nakawa. Ate Mrs.Honourable MP!! Mzee Agabudde.. The car a Second Hand SUV costs 70M/= and will need a couple of custom options(not with excitement of a peasant) from Kabulasoke, costing another 10M/=, bringing the total cost to UGX80M/- with more than 20M/- in debt and the log book remains with the car dealer.

What do you own?

The day the AGE "UNLIMITED" man who paid $50,0000 of public money for your fake vote chooses to nationalize all land in Uganda just by a stroke of a pen, enforced by guns you will have no recourse but suicide.

The moment a government has a law on its statutes to acquire any land on its whims, technically no one owns anything.

Instead of the AGE LIMIT, the debate should be about an evaluation of the cost versus benefits of defacing PRESIDENTIAL TERM LIMITS out of the Constitution since 2005.

- 1) Has the cancer of corruption in our body politics reduced or it's now an official form of political management?
- 2) Has the health care system improved to give every citizen some assurance of good health and long life without going to India for treatable ailments?
- 3) Does the national army, security or police have the appearance of a national character rather than ethnic outfits of friends, kins and family?

- 4) Has the economy created more jobs for the labor work force?
 - 5) Has government social service delivery mechanisms improved?
 - 7) Are government institutions independent, publicly accountable , efficient and functional?
 - 8) Do citizens have more faith in the democratic culture of our republic?
 - 9) Do young people have role models from our political elite from whom values of public service they will emulate?
 - 10) Have we attained more unity as Ugandans working hard to achieve a shared vision or we are back on our ethnic enclaves because of ethnic political and economic domination of one group by another?
 - 11) Beyond the oil discovery in 2006, has our economy built the structures for an industrial economy or we are stuck with our agrarian peasant economy with rampant land grabbing?
 - 12) Does our education system produce skilled citizens ready for the global market?
- You don't move on to another project without evaluating the marginal utility of the previous. It does not work that way. ----- Pivot the debate.

An old friend of mine, one of the best Electrical Engineers Uganda will ever produce, RONALD KYEYUNE one day came to my bed and jokingly went like:

"The day they visit ROBERT SHAKA, the whole school will have been, on visitation day"

This was after four years without him seeing any visitor of mine on the school compound.

Ronald, like all his sibblings were known geniuses in Budo. I never dared to contradict him on this one hoping one day he would be wrong. Much much respect. After 6 years, Ronald's theory had been validated and we all had to descend the hill after our tour of duty. Ronald and all his sibling were "COURSE" in their classes. Hard to know what these children had been fed on. In Budo you earned respect for your intellectual prowess. We all admired and respected the best of us. We all competed and strived to be the best we could in class.

I, Ronald, like my brother OLOBO BENJAMIN were residents of Nigeria House. AND Ronald, was right. Visitation day at King's College Budo was just a nightmare for me and a few other students.

All tribes of vehicles parked in the school football field, cricket pitch, upper pavilion of the football pitch, Administration block like the whole of Uganda had ascended on the Hill. I always chose to go to class to read and during my short breaks I stood through the window and my my my. The buzz of car and joyous parents and their children.

As usual the dining had MR.SEBUHHORO as Chief Cook even on this special day. He was a gentleman of Rwandan extract in his 60s the Baganda had named "SEBWOLO. MR.SEBUHHORO had a personal liking for me, because somehow he could tell we shared a history and blood but I was also his regular customer even on visitation day. He knew that despite the mammoth crowd of visitors there some of us who had to come and partake our share of the school meal.

On this day, the school dining had a paltry 6(I remember all of my colleagues by name but their privacy) customers out of 1200 and it's like the cooks always rioted on this day given the taste of the food. I guess it was the mind playing games on me. While the number could have been higher in the dining, some students were "POCKETED" being seen eating the school food on such a big day when someone from their village or slum of Kampala should have visited. So they chose to starve and "revenge" in the night when other students opened their boxes to eat what their parents had brought earlier in the day.

I must confess, my friends always gave me food for dinner. A cocktail of all spices and food. It turned out, I got more food than those visited and the mix required some magnesium tablets to resolve the chemical reactions on my stomach. Thank, God some parents brought magnesium tablets for their children. Somehow, my character endeared me to folks and supper I never went to the dining.

For 6 years at King's College Budo, I was never visited for many reasons. And I never took it personal. But the lessons were strong. I learnt that in life there are rich parents and rich children and their poor cousins on the other side. The parents were Commissioners, Ministers, Bishops, Judges, Parliamentarians, businessmen and women and largely most of them educated people.

King's College Budo taught me humility and the importance of focusing on what lay ahead than the huddles of the present. Above all, I learnt to build my own philosophy by clearly defining and accepting who I was so I could be what I am today. A lot lies ahead.

If my children went to King's College Budo today, unfortunately they will not find (RIP)MR.SEBUHORO.

To all my friends who shared your food with me around 9.00PM before lights out, thank you for your kindness. You allowed me develop my thick skin so I can't jump out of it. You are to blame for voting me DEPUTY HEAD PREFECT(1995) expecting favors in return.

M7 should live without sickness for as long as God wants. But after May,2021, he should pack his bags and go to Rwakitura or he should rent a house in Kawempe for himself and his family. On his verandah he can take selfies all through his retirement now that he has a stick.

No one begrudges M7 for living healthy and long by the way. Ugandans want to run their country different and show him that all along we had options which he thinks do not exist.

Uganda has maintained M7 at an astronomic cost since 2005 when he lifted Presidential Term Limits than it would have if he had left and handed over office to a fresh pair of hands.

Uganda has not had any economic benefit whatsoever for removing Presidential Term Limits since 2005 except more corruption, land grabbing, political assassinations of citizens, out right execution of citizens as we witnessed in Kasese, and degradation of public institutions. More and more stolen elections. He said at the burial of Mzee Sebana Kizito that all opposition are prostitutes to any willing buyer. Of course he did not know that a buyer of prostitutes is a prostitute himself/herself. The fact that a large section of our citizenry has been so disempowered that every man has by default turned into a beggar is a telling demonstration of how our society has been crippled.

Why remove AGE LIMIT when you can't account for the removal of TERM LIMITS 12 years ago completely with 2 stolen elections?

I have a house in Kawempe and am willing to half the rent for Mr. Museveni and his entire family. But come May, 2021, he must pack his small suitcase and go home in Rwakitura or Kawempe so we can give State House a new coat of paint.

This is the Uganda I envision.

A country that gives every young man and woman a fair chance in life if they work hard. I want a country that rewards those who carry their fair share of the national burden. A country that rewards hard work, ethics, integrity and punitively, consistently and equitably applies the laws of the land.

To achieve this, those who aspire to lead Uganda must have faith in the resourcefulness of every Ugandan (rich or poor) and provide an environment where every dreamer and hard worker at the end of his tenure in life can look back and stand up and say I gave life my best shot and I have no one else to blame.

40 million strong and impassioned by a vision that we can all share in the prosperity and the massive natural endowments of our country should be our collective goal led by leaders with a commitment and purpose to transform the country for all and not their kins, friends and family.

Transforming a country, business or one's personal life is not rocket science. It is discipline. It is methodical process coded in hard effort and sacrifices. It is a thoughtful consistency in planning, execution, measuring and evaluating of results towards an intended target state. It is not just throwing sacks of money to every problem.

Uganda's cumulative external debt since 1962 was $3.5BN in 2005 before the scrapping of Presidential Term Limits. This public debt was forgiven to zero in 2006 by the Paris Club under Highly Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) program of the World Bank.

Just 12 years since the scrapping of Presidential Term Limits in 2005, Uganda has accumulated debt of $10.5BN in 2017 and this is expected to top $30BN by 2030. The numbers just don't add up. Listen, there is a problem. And you know the problem. Some of you think this won't impact you in future because you have a T.V set in your living room today. As you grow old, you better pray the poverty of your parents in old age does not come to harass your frail old bones. Some of you will remember me when it is too late. Mzee Kabulasoke.....

Our biggest challenge is the FEAR for the KNOWN UNKNOWN and therefore CHANGE. It is very tempting for one to think, the current job you are doing is the best you will ever find in life. That you are now the very best you can ever be. So you become a prisoner to the present with all the variables you have no control over. It is your life. Your whole depends on it. That's it. Wrong! While inevitably you see your body gradually succumbing to the wear and tear of life due to the natural progression to time, your fear for change is human. At 42 I consider myself an old man, so I can't do operational or tactical maneuvers I did many years ago. Now that is for more athletic young people. I can only offer strategic foresight.

Most of the time our imagination is constrained by our daily distractions. Amidst the chaos and the background noise each one of us is looking for a relatively comfortable hole to hide or to live. When we find one, the trauma of the recent huddles in the path to it plays our mind that this could be the very best there is you can ever be or have. Again, wrong! It explains why each one of us in our small "State House" does not believe there is any other life outside that small hole unless the change is inevitably imposed by an act of God or age that we have no control over.

It explains the political inertia, procrastination and stagnation. It explains our penchant to validate the abnormal as normal including fraudulent and sham elections. We are sham lot. We can't follow order. We refuse to obey the law or enforce it equitably, consistently and punitively as a deterrent.

The World is going through a 4th industrial revolution and the 19th Century Agricultural revolution in England has not arrived in Africa just yet. But in Uganda we talk of bottle irrigation and distribution of hand held hoes to all villages to combat poverty. The moment we got independence we thought we had arrived to our respective "small comfortable hole" of self governance. We thought all was done as long as the White man packed his bags and left us the hell alone. Yes, we thought we could handle our problems. And indeed we can. But lack the will and discipline to.

Change is hard work. Transformation is hard work and painful sacrifices. By fearing change, we are deliberately saying transformation will be for other generations. We are saying change must be strictly inevitable to happen to us like growing old. But change can be planned for by assessing, measuring and monitoring risk to a desired end state.

Africa must discard the fear for change. We are born beautiful, we go through puberty as teenagers, we grow up looking all nice and we age and look our old self. That is change. Aging is scary to many people because it takes away what we think is the best in us. We all want to stay young like staying in that small hole of relative comfort. It comes with benefits. As we age the benefits change to.

Africa must embrace change and change management as a normal process of governance. We must stop fearing change. Change is good. Risk taking is part of innovation and a driver for change. We must explore experimentation rigorously. We must adapt what has worked elsewhere here appropriately. It is management science. That is what science is all about; imagination, experimentation and discovery. This is how people are discovering objects in space. This is how the internet came about. This is how penicillin was discovered.

So the Africa where everyone fears change and wants to stay hidden in his respective hole of relative false comfort is a change constrainer that must be challenged rigorously through engagement, education and radical shift in mindset.

Finally, the leader for change is deep inside you. You can choose to be a change waiter or change agent. Those you look up to suffer from the same fear factor for change. I am sure you would be like why does he not want to go rest in his home in Rwakitura? Why is Kabila of Zaire refusing to hold elections? Why is Nkurunziza of Burundi stuck in the chair? Why is Kagame holding on? Why does Robert Gabriel Mugabe want to go down with Zimbabwe?

FEAR FOR CHANGE!!

A majority of the people are pre-disposed to start from NEGATIVE TERRITORY because of so many background factors. By the time they reach point-ZERO they are either already "exhausted" or surprised they even made it to zero thus the endless celebrations that go on for soooo loooong yet the journey for their fellow competitors lucky enough or with ability to rig the competition to have a head start began at Zero or ahead.

Technically, life is NOT going to be fair unless of course society evolves and vertically graduates from its agrarian or peasant mass mentality to a level where people develop a sense of social appreciation of the innate potential of every young man and woman, rich or poor if given a chance to opportunity. In a civilized society, a man who can swim will not attach more value on a phone than a drowning woman in drainage channel.

So you need to understand your reference point on the number line to fully appreciate the effort required to go all the way to the end in an aggressive eco-system in which your interests are in competition with everyone else's. Remember, it is a lop-sided competition. Those who remember integers will easily understand my point.

-60 -50- -40 -30 -20 -10 0 10 20 30 40 50 60

For purposes of illustration, in this life competition some people start at -60 while others start at +20 and others at point-0. If you start at -60 and burn out at 0, you too deserve a medal my friend. But remember, to others that is the starting point towards +60.

Starting at -60 charging towards +60 is not a life sentence. It is not a punishment. It is your life and the responsibilities handed to you by those who brought you here. And your effort is going to be dependent largely on your efficiency, discipline and consistency.

There are many people who start from negative territory and make it passed those who start +20 and sustain their achievement. And there is no guarantee that if you start at +20 you cannot be pushed back in the queue in negative territory. Sustaining your forward march therefore is going to be dependent on your decision process and the ability to navigate the competition.

Of course you need a social support system as well but largely this will come because you have the ability to provide solutions to people's problems. People want solutions developers and problem solvers not loafers who wallow in self pity and stay on the line at -60 waiting for someone to come feel sorry for them.

Uganda's public DEBT stock stands at $11.2Bn and projected to hit $30bn by 2030 at the current rate(Bank of Uganda)

What is the borrower(government) putting to the credit suppliers as collateral?

Of course hedging the OIL is one of them. But it appears the credit suppliers(Chinese+Indians) want

LAND too since their population combined is now more than 2BN people. AND am not saying it's wrong for the China man to come here.

Could ,however, this LAND BILL explain why Govt wants to technically have the last word on land? See, if government wakes up one morning and says look here is the law, all Uganda land will be used for public projects and compensation according to the law is secondary where public interest concerned.

Would not that put all land in Uganda in the hands of the government(chief borrower) and therefore convert citizens as defacto tenants on their former land?

Look at our refugee policy. It's only Uganda that welcomes all refugees around the World when everyone is shutting the door. But is the same Uganda battling gross youth unemployment that chases the same refugees vending fruits on the streets of Kampala into drainage channels to meet their death.

Ideally, if Govt has the credibility and trust to act in national interest this law would not be a bad idea. The problem is public credibility which is in tatters. If people can steal ELECTIONS then they can steal LAND. We have a problem. The public needs a sense that those in charge of public affairs are credible and have their trust.

Indians and Chinese are all over the place looking for a breather. Their governments are enabling their migration to ease internal pressure through these public credit schemes.

Government wants collateral for the NEXT massive borrowing and technically you are all going to be its tenants.

Tenants pay tenancy fees and quite frankly the only effective and assured source of revenue is property tax but govt need a sense of ownership(law) to make a sitting tenant pay tenancy fees or property tax too. So the LAND BILL is a BIG STICK coming and it can be applied selectively as many laws have been by the way. It is a good stick to use against anyone with politically "incorrect" views.

When the late AIGP.ANDREW FELIX KAWEESI threatened to EVICT BRIG.KASIRYE

GGWANGA from a property in Makindye, the soldierman said he will deal with any Police man who dares come to his compound.

FELIX(RIP) in his usual air of confidence in the rocking chair at Police Headquarters, shot back that the General will be evicted. The General went to Mengo for help that he had paid Busulu. Mengo saved their own from the fangs of FELIX and his friends.

Now the General is back in the news for torching a tractor of a land grabber and another Spokesman is scratching the back of an old General whose warnings are mama nyabo.

We must put the AGE LIMIT clause in the Constitution to test. M7 removed the TERM LIMIT before it was tested in 2005 after paying poor people in parliament and has failed to account for his achievement in the removal of the clause apart from bringing his entire clan to work in government and drain the public treasury. Why can't any of his relatives work for mukwano industries for example or Radio Sanyu as Presenters for instance? These are good jobs Ugandans do.

You don't amend a law before testing the validity of purpose for which it was made. In 2001, M7 told his colleagues that he needed just one more term to professionalize the UPDF, then his son was just a LIEUTENANT in the UPDF. Now he is the ONLY General allowed to Congratulate regional election "thieves" calling them "HIS FRIENDS". When did a UPDF LIEUTENANT of 2001, become a friend of GEN.PAUL KAGAME for instance?

Little did his naive colleagues know that Professionalizing the UPDF was to fast track his own to the rank of General and hold fort before purging term limits out of the constitution.

Stop sugar coating the problem. The current attempt to remove the AGE LIMIT and amend the land law is aimed at establishing a MONARCH.

If you are in charge of all LAND & you are in power for life then what a modern KINGDOM you have there with landless subjects whose job is to work on your land as tenants and paying taxes.

No sane person should support any constitutional amendment at this time until after 2025.

BTW, I neither HATE nor hold any personal grudges against Mr.Museveni or any member of his family, I just love Uganda more.

I am a non-apologetic FDC card holding member. I respect Gen.Mugisha Muntu for many reasons. One as my elder, a man who has made his personal sacrifices for country and a humble servant of God. Moses Byamugisha is my young brother I have grown to admire for his ambition, defiant stamina for good governance, intellect and youthful appeal. Hon.Patrick Amuriat is a battle tested leader in his own right who has made his immense contributions to the democratic process in Uganda which cannot be taken away from him. Hon.Mubarrack Munyagwa does not need introduction for his activism against the dictatorship. I do appreciate every incremental effort towards our collective objective.

It is important to remember therefore, that in this struggle, some of our opposition colleagues have paid the ultimate price for our collective search for freedom and human dignity. That our opponents have continued to classify the opposition as politically "hostile" or enemies of state is an old ideology which carries an existential threat constantly looming over heads of targeted individuals.

Some of our colleagues have been crippled by poisoning, others abducted, lost jobs, jailed, assassinated, while many youths have been executed by security forces for exercising their constitutional right to assemble and demonstrate peacefully. Our strive, therefore, for a better country transcends any individual interests including the fear that has consumed our political adversaries. Our vision is that no one should live in fear because of the political ambition of a single individual or group of individuals. Our opponents have held country hostage reducing citizen participation into a mere form of monetary transaction rather than fostering a culture of civic duty.

We must re-assure the entire country that we are the platform of the future. A future in which even our current adversaries and their children have a place in our vision of a country of shared prosperity and peace. This should be our mission that we must emphasize in our policy agenda moving forward without laying down our defiance tools against dictatorship.

We must continue to work together and foster a culture of strategic cooperation with our colleagues to heal the country and convince even our opponents that we stand not only for a united country just for ourselves, but one in which every young man and woman will stand an equal chance under our Constitutional Republic when they give life their very best shot.

There will be many organizational contradictions and challenges along the way in these internal processes. We must avoid distractions from the strategic agenda deliberately.

Forum for Democratic Change(FDC) for me, is a pivotal political vehicle whose contribution to the democratic process in Uganda is above every other objective. And despite all the labor pains of our fragile institutions, it provides the promise and hope for a future of the Uganda I espouse.

At this point I will ONLY request that FDC Party Headquarters publishes its Mobile Money line so I can send my contribution to the financial health of the party. The party must continue to leverage all available channels including technology and other avenues through which it can mobilize finances and other resources from its support base. We strongly believe in the ideals of the party.

The supporters will even be more vigilant having a stake in the party by getting more involved and feeling more engaged by the leadership. Our opponents use the public treasury, weapons and security forces financed by the very population through all tribes of taxes to finance their hegemony suppressing the same population. The same population, wants to build the opposition by financing it as the alternative vehicle. These are their parties. They have resources to marshal and extend their reach and counter the adversary. Supporters don't just to be voters but stakeholders of the entire democratic process of their country.

FDC and other opposition supporters demonstrated this zeal and enthusiasm during the 2016 Elections towards H.E President of the Republic of Uganda Rtd.Col.Dr.Kiiza Besigye. We must therefore constantly engage them by tapping into their enthusiasm. It is from this engagement the party will gain more insights and deepen its reach into the sentiments and issues of its power base and the growing resentment of our opponents despite the iron curtain they have imposed on the population. The party leadership must remain focused rather than distracted on the strategic issues even when dealing with tactical and operational aspects of the political dynamics in the country.

The leadership must constantly scan for talent and infuse it in its policy committees from which strategic blue prints on which the party derives its national appeal must be aligned.

They CAN accuse YOU of anything and use their filthy courts to jail you for life or their criminal gangs to assassinate you depending on your circumstances. So the Kamogas and Co are not new cases of this impunity. The lack of due process, credibility in institutions is just glaring. The optics are very bad and for me I terribly despise mediocrity, you have no idea.

I was not just accused of being a one TOM VOLTAIRE OKWALINGA but a fictitious case of "AGGRAVATED ROBBERY" was recorded on the immigration system to justify my being placed on a NO-FLY LIST at the Airport and all border posts around the country.

I, Mzee Kabulasoke, in armed robbery is like accusing the POPE in the Vatican of prostitution or SODOMY. Whoever, took you people to school should demand a refund immediately.

Aggravated robbery means one is classified as armed and dangerous and therefore a SHOOT ON SIGHT POLICY applies. The same people who ABDUCTED me on my way to work, fidgeted to sanitize the amateurish abduction by an appalling ritual of illegal detention, illegal prosecution and illegal remand in jail after rejecting a COURT ORDER demanding my immediate release from illegal detention. Who does all this?

RAPE or SODOMY would have been a better innovation. You can accuse me of anything but always remember, the BURDEN OF PROOF is entirely on your shoulders and I will never make it easy for you. You can't accuse me of stupidity when you have no proof to validate your accusation.

Who the hell does all that to Mzee Kabulasoke unless you are MORALLY BANKRUPT? I must admit am SPECIAL. Yes, I am very special. The earlier you accept this reality the better. If you aspire to run an NGO or a Political Party in a poor country you ought to have a business strategic plan that reduces the risk of donor apathy.

NGOs like Political Parties rely traditionally on donor financing to sustain their operations. But donors are as unpredictable as women, employment and the weather. As an aspiring leader of a political organization ultimately the structural formations across the country are critical and require financial resources to sustain them.

So a hybrid-business model that entails resource mobilization & capital investments in business entities that can generate streams of income for the party will eventually build the party's political war chest sustainably.

It is feasible to rally supporters around an idea that they believe in and are willing to mobilize resources to champion a cause so close to them. If 1,000,000 FDC supporters each on average contributed 1,000/- in a campaign of 6 months, FDC could mobilize 2BN in a year and if this was done over a period of time with a consistent strategy, it is possible to acquire a prime property in Kampala and do what has taken Church of Uganda more than 40 years to put up Church House on Kampala Road.

Just like the Catholic Church put up MAPERA HOUSE, the model is the same. Your power base is what provides the resources to put up something that give your organization a stake in the small economy so you can marshal your political agenda with some energy.

Political parties in Uganda should stop thinking short term and just about political campaigns.

Politics is not just about getting power or staying in power. Look at these who have been in power for 32 years. Clueless without their principal stuck like a hen hatching chicks on top of the vault of the Central Bank.

How can a political party be in power for 32 years and it can't own anything apart from abusing public facilities?

So this advice goes to all Political organizations including the ponzie schemes in Kampala. It is not too late. The reason UPC remains in Kampala at-least is because of Uganda House despite the dilapidation.

Rally supporters around an idea that the party needs a solid source of income in order to push its political agenda forward without over reliance on donor funds which are often horribly meager and unpredictable. Donors will follow suit when they see a path to power.

So the leaders of FDC tussling it out now, I would be glad to hear something along those lines. What business model have you to help the party build its financial muscle on its way to power?

How come Uganda martyrs don't attract the same quality of pilgrims like the 2million Haj in Saudi Arabia? I would imagine 2million Christians tourists flying and jamming Entebbe Airport from the US, Europe, Latin America and Asia. Uganda's economy would be in a seasonal wind fall.

But I see ONLY elderly women walkers from Kisumu, Lira, Fortportal and possibly Mutukula and youths motivated by alcohol and pork dos. Which foreign exchange do these people bring in?

Even the Vatican can't encourage Italians to fly down here. But every African elite who flies to the Vatican is all over social media showcasing their "Hollowness". Do you walk to the Vatican? I see African elites, MPs, Ministers, Presidents kneeling in the Vatican or Mecca but horrible when it comes to Namugongo.

Saudi Arabia is clever. 2 million tourists programmed to come and spend in the economy every year. There is something not right in this religious tourism.

We MUST demand Christians in England at least to FLY here annually to celebrate our martyrs. Why did these people die if not Christianity?

We are so addicted to "fraud" that even with evidence glaring we still expect someone to walk away with a fraudulent victory and the rest of us walk back to our slum lives and life grinds on. It is "African" culture there must be a winner of a fraudulent election. This is a serious scar on the conscience of a billion poor people across the black continent.

In 1981, some people did not go to court but the bush and a country lost more than 500,000 lives over what they called SHAM ELECTIONS in 1980 with an economy in ruins . These have become experts at organizing the same sham elections they took a country to war for and 32 years still perfecting how to organize another sham election. Now they want to deface the constitution and impose another fraud again talking about stability or some other scam. You must be a morally bankrupt person to associate with this kind of naked emptiness.

Those who fear court decisions against evidence of electoral fraud over perceived violence are suffering from years of trauma. They are literary "prisoners of conscience". But society grinds on with incremental value additions.

Fraudulent elections are a shame and their culture must be rejected. Those who organize sham elections determined to steal them are un African. It is not African culture to organize low quality elections and accept the fake results.

So the Supreme Court ruling in Kenya rather than violence on the streets or going to the bush to start a rebellion should be welcomed by those who still have some hope in a society determined to advance irrespective of the pain.

Africa must embrace pockets of good results. We are not producing iPhones, Planes, missile defense systems, launching space ships, discovering medicine against Ebola or HIV. We are not manufacturing ships to advance our trade with the world. We are not producing textile. We are not even expanding our food basket to feed our exploding population. We are not industrializing production of our economy. Instead we are perfecting electoral fraud.

We must win our place in the world by working harder to improve our image as a continent of poverty, wars, disease and ignorance. We must reject, unequivocally, every semblance of fake leaders whenever we see them.

Those who wanted us to celebrate another fraudulent election on the continent among so many in Rwanda, Uganda, Zimbabwe, Burundi, still birth in Congo, The Gambia where some guy had to be threatened with military action to run out of office, please spare us your mental/intellectual poverty.

I will officially be making 42 years in November, 2017. My years here have been one of adventure, struggle and self discovery of the African man in my blood. Starting next year, I will be watching the next 8 years closely as I approach the 50 mark with gusto. Call it a survival mentality. I am setting my agenda for the next 10 years now subtly. I must confess I have made a couple mistakes along the way trying to learn the best of trades and am hell bent on correcting a few imperfections about myself. I will also dial-deeper into my emotions and trust less in my gut and instincts.

The last two years I have been less trusting because some people appeared hell bent on compromising my security, safety and I took extreme measures to preserve my life.

Largely, my public views have been shaped by my life in the last 42 years. I grew up working hard to stay alive in my formative years and the desire to keep the dreams of the little boy inside me alive and nurtured. My dreams remain big and I have touched some of them beautiful.

I was trained when very little to not express my emotions but question why things are what they are around me. So I have relied more on my gut and instinct than my emotions to be the imperfect mold you see today as your friend or political adversary, whatever the classification.

As I morph into the old man I am, am grateful to God and the few good men and women who have stood by me. I was not a very simple child to manage and my grand mother Olivia Kagere and my teachers at Wobulenzi Parents' School can attest. My primary school teachers put in more hours of overtime trying to correct the time lag I had dropped out of school for 5 years and got results for it.

There are many junctions points in my life where critical interventions by such people and God saved my life and have kept it on course and am 42 now. The last two years have been a mix of things. I will focus on the promise of a fine African elder that stares me in the face moving forward.

I want to be a fine old African man in the next 30 years whose word can be trusted. I want to talk to young people across the continent and tell them "It will be okay, just keep pushing on. Try to be the very best at everything you do. Time is your best resource. And give life your best shot".

I want my children to be known as children of the "Old African man".

I am at that stage where I am looking forward to my evening years with the honor that I kept the promise I made to my forefathers. To preserve their modest legacy as hard working men.

To my generation peers born in the 1970s, it has been a long journey. It has been rough and rugged.

We have more mileage to cover and I hope we hold each other's hands and keep pushing strong for a society far better for our children than that we bequeathed from others so when our time is up we can look back and tell those who will take our place that we did everything with pride.

The BLACK MAN has to define the place he wants to occupy in the world and work to earn it. Our standing in the world is not given, it is earned with hard work. In every conversation or negotiation, there will always be cultural bias. You are going to be judged even before you speak and the perceptual judgement of the other party is going to change as and when/if they become comfortable with you during the conversation. Life is a series of negotiations(give/take/reject). If you don't have transport fare for a public bus and walk up to the driver, your attitude matters. If the police stops you, the consequences are going to have a bearing largely on your reaction and the officer's attitude. How you negotiate that space in time matters. If it's a job interview, this is a moment of utmost preparation for you to negotiate your way around the attitude of the panel members.

Even dating a girl/boy is a series of incremental negotiations that ultimately result into mutual agreement/disagreement.

To earn the respect from others, we must put our individual minds and personal behavior in order, we must organize, identify and develop talent among our best, institutionalize and strengthen the things that safeguard our collective interests.

We must be known for a culture of respecting one another. Africa must be known around the world for respecting human life for instance and preserving the human dignity of her people. Does it matter that others with whom we often "negotiate" in a lopsided agenda respect us and where we come from? Why should they?

Development or national advancement does not fall from the sky. It is deliberate experimentation, exploration, consistent planning and execution of national development plans for which leaders are committed to held accountable for results or the lack of them.

We can sit on top of Mt. Kilimanjaro and blame colonialists, slave traders and everything else, but until we recognize the basic fundamentals of our BLACKNESS, educate our people to respect our laws, evolve a culture of believing and respecting institutions, produce competitive products and services on demand among us and around the world, we are "walking" on water for failing to do even the basics like organizing "free and fair" elections.

There are many odds along the way. It is a competitive world. The Chinese with even their "fake" products are dumping their produce on the global economy. An average China man or Indian remains poor. But no one can ignore the industry of the man from Beijing or New Delhi unlike Kampala or Kinshasa.

The boom of the cottage industry in China and India is the talk of the world. The industrialization of production of the Chinese economy which we refer to as "Made in China" has not stopped the Chinese from mass production.

But Africa can't manufacture even a single "free and fair election" without controversy as a way of demonstrating effort at societal organization. Just one single "free and good" election. But we are engaged in manufacturing "prophets" and "despots" in a grand mass hopelessness of abnormal proportions while others are strengthening economic and defense alliances such as NATO, The European Union, ASEAN among others. There is a problem. When we travel to Washington, Beijing or London for trade or credit negotiations, we are engaging the very best of their negotiators. You don't engage in negotiations without understanding the adversary on the other side of table.

By the time, they walk up to the table, they know our "culture", weaknesses and the remote traces of strength. The Chinese, Japanese or French already know that our negotiators are relatives of the President or King by marriage or whatever blood relation concoction of the fake feudalist system being morphed up here.

One billion poor people with their wealth of monarchical rulers and you have a full blown problem. There must be committment by the elite to the African cause to transform society by defining problems, proposing solutions and the leadership having the legitimacy and demonstrating committment to solve these problems through institutions.

But the leaders can only commit to address these problems by doing the basics. Firstly, demonstrating their committment to the rules and laws of their land. Secondly, instilling discipline by enforcing and applying the laws consistently and fairly. Finally, they must preserve the legitimacy of state institutions by enforcing accountability.

It is easier to organize "free and fair elections" than industrializing an agrarian economy. So if you can't organize a society around the legitimacy of the state and its institutions, then.....the structural and economic issues become peripheral "distractions" to the political class.

When you are in prison, confined to a mental "wheel-chair" and the mercy of the prison warden you pray for a "miracle" especially when you don't understand the intention of the jailer.

Read further. Everyone lately seems to be hankering for a "miracle" and it could define the state of mind of the population in Uganda. Everyone wants a "miracle" of WEALTH since it has the potential to bring all the other things.

A country with a mass mindset in anticipation for an elusive "miracle" sounds like some kind of mass mental jail where people feel they have run out of options.

Even the old man seems to be looking for miracle to have his AGE TWEAKED just to extend his tenure in a State House for lack of options of where to go.

Others are praying for scholarship, a car, a phone, wives and husbands. Others are praying for the miracle of a baby. If you are a virgin and you want a miracle of a baby, like Mary the Mother of Jesus, oh you really need a miracle.

How do you pray for a scholarship you have never applied for? You are always on the internet watching music and have never searched for scholarship opportunities but every prayer is about random scholarships or cars turning prayer into some form of gambling.

If you lack hygiene, etiquette and you have serious behavioral or attitude problems to deal with relationships, you need a "miracle". People who just have no clue about hygiene are constantly looking for husbands and wives. You bathe painfully, brushing is a problem. You can't deal with your funny attitude towards other people. Oh you need a miracle. These things are already a lot of work. Now you have no clue about hygiene down there. Please please, you need a "miracle".

Then you have people who can't commit to completing any task looking for job. You refused to complete a school program. You refuse to finish the plumbing certificate. You don't want to skill your self. You can't invest in yourself to take move to another level unless someone else pays the price. You dropped out of a mentorship program for lack of patience. You are not committed to the demands of organization. And you want a job. You need a "miracle".

Let me say this. We all need to support one another and build social support systems to help those pushing hard enough. There is no quick fix to our problems unless we ourselves as individual are willing to walk that extram mile to solve some of these deficiencies.

If you want a husband or wife, work on your attitude, conduct some self introspection. Is it hygiene. Is it something I have not paid attention to? If it's a job same stuff. Stop looking for a "miracle" or "luck", they don't exist.

A miracle is a mirage in your head bwana. Life is hard and you have to get used to it. It is going to get worse if it's not bad enough.

Rugunda says no scientific reason to retire 75 year olds. Uganda has really wasted people. One day Rugunda will also be dumped like Amama, Bukenya etal albeit scientifically before their 75 birthday. I know many people have a lot of respect for Rugunda for the blurry clarity of what he stands for but Rugunda has never had ambition beyond working for government in whichever department. If his Boss today, appointed a toddler as President and Rugunda the regent, he would still say the same. "No scientific reason to prevent a toddler from becoming President as long as am the regent". Please tell me. What does Rugunda stand for? What has he stood for all his political career apart from being a Minister of Transport, Health, Internal Affairs and Presidency? What does one stand for apart from being a Minister or Prime Minister?

It is a tag of mental war now. You must do everything to outlive and out manouver your adversary. An adversary who never gives up, efficiently uses his resources, eventually drain the other.

Remember, the reason your adversary is going to resort to physical means to assert oneself is because you have already won the mental resistance. His reaction is physical because his mental resistance has waned and been exhausted. Last resort is the physical contest(Push & Pull). Here people get hurt and that is what happens when man's animal instincts kick in.

His next option in the toolkit is to subject you to physical intimidation, stripping you of your wealth or out right assassination if it must come to that. If you planned well, this should be much easier but often it's ugly of course.

Conflict does not kick in overtly in the initial stages but latently. It starts as a battle of minds and whoever loses that battle often is the first to engage in overt means to remain in the contest. Now you know why the body count of women on the streets is growing Wakiso.

You must always build contingencies for all these stages of "war" to be part of the next phase. There will be losses on either side. The adversary must however be:

1. Out numbered
2. Out "gunned".
3. Out "witted"
4. Out "flanked"

He is going to get desperate and thus the next phase. You must learn to write the code for your adversary. Very predictable because they know their numbers cannot go higher. They need money to raise their numbers and you don't.

Their fighting spirit can only be fueled with money(mercenaries), your forces are motivated by sheer will to win.

The adversary does not trust any of his members because he knows everyone around him is a mercenary in it for the money. The word of every member of his entourage has to be paid for. When the survival of your adversary is all about "MONEY" you know your forces are in the flanks on top of all the surrounding hill waiting for the right moment.

Let government first conduct an inventory and audit of all public assets that have been sold off since 1986, determine value for money and publicly account for these asset transactions. Since Mr.Museveni insists government Valuer's know how to do the job and uses the adjective of "THIEVES" defrauding government, the inventory and forensic audit should demonstrate whether the process of selling off public assets has been credible & caught the THIEVES in its net so the public can have the trust that their land and properties once taken over by government will be compensated adequately. Who are these THIEVES by the way Mr.Intelligence consumer? How many of these THIEVES are behind bars? These very people are your friends and family Mr.Museveni. You and them are enforcers/benders and breakers of these laws. Why should the Land Law be the silver bullet then? Can Mr.Museveni for instance justify that he personally needed the KISOZI RANCH ,which was a public asset by the way, more than the government that previously owned it because he had a more unique project than the government could execute on that land? If government has unique projects today which require land, why did he and others acquire government assets knowing government has projects that require land?

There are many public assets that have been taken over by government officials fraudulently because the regime is full of conflicted people between running a government in public trust and their personal motivation to enrich themselves.

They have been stripping all public assets including land and now want a law to easily take private property without adequate compensation. Recently UBC land theft was in the news. A one Margaret Muhanga was quoted claiming to have sold goats worth 10BN/- to acquire UBC land during cross examination at Parliament. There is no action to deter these people from corruption tendencies. It all ended there. The moment it is determined one tendered false documents to defraud government, legal sanction must be executed as deterrence. Instead regime operatives can arrogantly come on TV and justify their intent by selling air that they sold goats at $3M and the story ends there.

The government has literally lost all public assets to powerful government officials including Mr. Museveni, friends and family in the name of Privatization. Land and properties that belonged to Uganda Railway was stolen or sold to public officials on the cheap. Every public corporation that owned land or houses was stripped to the bone under Mr. Museveni's watch for all the 32 years.

Generals have now descended on rural communities displacing peasants off land thus the current wave of land grabbing conflicts across the country.

Politically connected regime operatives are engaged in land grabbing just out speculation. They are not engaged in commercial extensive or intensive mechanized agriculture. Just land speculators motivated by greed and hollow economics.

You can't displace peasants off their source of livelihood just to own square miles of land and fence it off or use military personnel just because you can and think you are well programmed mentally. Which government projects are causing this stampede to quickly take private property?

So this Museveni land campaign is the most useless political campaign of his entire career. His government has failed the people. It has failed the credibility test. This is a regime which thrives on impunity, corruption and sheer lawlessness.

Why should people who have failed to manage public assets be trusted with a law that grants them lee-way to take over private property without adequate compensation?

Government officials sold public properties to themselves including cars at give away prices. Why would they not do the same with private property?

Mr.Museveni must be confronted openly that the land issue is out of scope of our patience.

He must be courageous enough and leave the land issue to Ugandans and their future government that will be capable of ensuring public accountability, transparency and win credibility.

The KISOZI RANCH belonged to government.

How Mr.Museveni turned out to be the owner of square miles of public land, turning it into his private ranch is the same example other public officials sold themselves public properties on the cheap in the name of building a non existing middle class.

They have not built industries, no factories for displaced people to supply their labor, just people fueling UNEMPLOYMENT with speculative economic policies.

If you have been a change waiter, you are going to have to see grey hair on your buttocks first as your reward just like many of our parents today hanging on a thread of poverty and despair.

Go be a change agent and therefore a change maker. Make your ultimate contribution to the aggregate effort. If you have failed to bring change for your personal self then try to do it for your community. There in could be your opportunity.

Wherever you are, the time to do something for which you can be remembered that you once lived has never been like now.

We can all continue to live under the illusion that someone else will do it for us. We have been for many years. We have waited for every promise that has remained a mirage.

Let me tell you. Some of you are still holding on to a perfect political deception because like many, the feeling of lack of options is a scary reality. It is true the options are limited because we sat back on our smooth small stools and waited for someone else to deliver promise after another for which we made no sacrifice. It is also true a majority of us quite frankly have no option at all. Terrible.Right? Do something. Options don't fall from the skies, they are planned for. Risk scenarios are drawn and contingency plans developed and tested regularly.

It has always been political deception albeit to a gullible population. The choices are BLACK & WHITE. It is your choice unfortunately and no one will carry your weight. You will have to carry your share of the burden whether today or tomorrow but you will have to carry the burden of making the sacrifice or the lack of will to do your part.

BTW, if you are in a state of relative comfort because you have a small job or a business, think that if the economy was bigger you possibly would be better off just like your neighbor. Unfortunately, your small job is your prison now. It will be worse if the environment gets worse beyond your control when you become like those you thought are worse off. All these things are connected.

In their mind, they are deluded they are not alone in their sense of emptiness since they never see you smile. But why would you smile anyway? We live in a world where hopelessness is increasingly occupying more space than reason.

While I do not begrudge those who pursue company, I am allergic to lack of direction and focus. I am allergic to ambiguity, reason I have always been able to see through the mask of greed.

How do you explain the silence of the educated class amidst all the rage boiling beneath the surface? They created the problem and now muted like they are on sabbatical in the Vatican. Today they look at their aging frames and have no idea how gullible they have been. They hide in their dusty cobwebbed homes in shame patiently waiting for an elusive small pension check if they are lucky they can be remembered from the large crowd. Their children are unemployed or riding Boda Bodas just to barely survive which effectively is a dead insurance policy. The dignity of every man and woman, young and old is to stand up for something in life. That one can look back and say, I was proud to stand up for the truth.

There are those who believe that in a society of "man eat man and dog eat dog" there is no dignity to aspire for. How then does a country get on its trajectory for civilization? Why should a country be run like a game park of wild beasts? Why should human beings behave like wild animals? Anyway, this is my perspective. You are all entitled to your perspectives and may you enjoy your animal instinct to outlive the other animals.

But we are supposed to be an ancient civilization. What exactly was all this civilization about? What did we come up with that the world has looked up us with awe? Did we invent penicillin to cure plague or syphilis? Did we engineer a spaceship to challenge others into space? What was Africa's civilization all about until recently when we invented a super ship to explore around the new world so we can discover Islands across oceans and conquer new territory? We all don't have to turn the country upside down just because some small group of people think they might be lucky once again to extend the patience of an exhausted population. It is dangerous to test fate with an angry country. A country scarred to the bone just to make some small group of ungrateful people comfortable to think it belongs to them exclusively to destroy.

We have been a highly tribal society. We have defended our own in raping the country. Every regime has tried to be highly ethnically inclined to scrape the country on behalf of its tribe. It is here now. We see in the Command Structure of Security Forces and entire government fomenting this ethnic economic and military domination of other tribes. The lower rank and file of poorly paid service men are given orders to slay their own people on behalf of a small cartel that feeds off the ethnic food chain. These are people trapped. Other hecklers are joining the chorus for lack of options. They have been out in the economic cold for far too long to avoid joining those who have dominated them for donkey years. Recipe for a troubled future.

Let me tell you my friends, I refuse to be Party to this uncultured behavior. I refuse to be part of cheap political schemes that cast aside the things that I learnt when growing up. I refuse to steal from society. I must pay my taxes, I must respect others. I must do everything to earn what belongs to me. I refuse to feed off the poor who instead need my compassion. I do not support the dehumanization of the African people by our own people.

The 2017 core agenda by M7 & his people was the promise to end poverty by Christmas. All over a sudden their priority has shifted to defacing the Uganda Constitution as though POVERTY is hiding in the small book.

Just like BONA BAGGAWALE in 2006 after scrapping TERM LIMITS, the slogan just produced a sham KWAGALANA GROUP, Ugandans never got wealthy.

Whatever these people fear is REAL. 32 years and you are still afraid of living normal lives like everyone else. What is it that M7 fears most about retirement?

He has not ended poverty. 32 years he has not reduced unemployment. No matter how much those with work to do try, low wages and can barely get by. Soldiers? Very very poor. Police men? Veeery very poor. Teachers? Very poor. Name any profession. I will tell you. Boda Bodas? Taxi drivers? Builders? Plumbers? You tell me. Even the thieves don't have enough to steal. Yes, thieves and their new recruits. Instead they are now murdering their would be wives with a deadly episode of rage. Something is not right. Poverty has reached epidemic proportions that educated people now behave like functionally illiterate people. I warned you all. Things are going to get more ELEPHANT. You must be worried because the reality is what you go through everyday. Do something about it. Starts with deep reflection.

What if we allowed M7 the removal of his AGE LIMIT thing so he can fundamentally bring this idleness out of Ugandans?

Most people do not fully appreciate that M7 is actually teaching Ugandans how to plan and set clear timelines for their PATIENCE. And the only way one can pull this off is pushing them until you reach the Republic's mass elastic limit where everyone must be angry in order to do something. Some societies are programmed as such. Nothing can be done until people are all angry.

BTW, no leader in the whole world delivers public goods out of his own good will but the aggregate and quality demands of the population. How can for instance a serious population send a person like ABIRINGANYA and his village neighbor's daughter to parliament? You can call me names all you want but low quality people are what they are. You see, we can blame M7 for many things but the quality of the character of the man is a function of the mass quality of Ugandans. Let's cut M7 some slack here. If he was a business man, we would say he has produced the Ugandan product. A population quite frankly that needs some serious reprogramming.

M7 winning his coveted AGE LIMIT removal will also have his way to NATIONALIZE PUBLIC LAND eventually because the same Ugandans clueless of his intentions will send him the ABIRIGAS & ANITES. It is until all Ugandans including the so called MPs, cultural and religious leaders, have everything taken away from them by a law made by their very stupid people that they will wake up from their idleness and hypocrisy. Right now we are paying for our lack of focus and high appetite for cheap political schemes and general lack of clarity of what constitutes civilized behavior.

M7 knows all traditional(Buganda, Bunyoro, Toro, Ankole), Chiefs(Japadhola, Iteso,Acholi, Kamuswaga, Sabaluli) and religious institutions and their leaders lack character to even understand their role in public governance with the exception of their motivation for receiving public groceries and yellow envelopes.

What if religious leaders came out unequivocally and challenged the current hegemony in a unity motivated by patriotism? What if all cultural leaders came out in unity, openly and consistently opposed this Public shame to our Republic? M7 knows the old men wearing robes are in this for their own "stomachs" and their interests have nothing to do with masses.

So the quality of our population needs a transformational agenda that can't be delivered by the current quality of institutions and vision of these people.

If traditional institutions and religious leaders issue one statement in a year and go back in their Pajeros to meet the man who wants to rule for life at night or during his annual prayer breakfast rituals, eat his "samosas" complete with the tissue holding them as their eyes are glued to poor dancing youth groups in front of them; it's because the quality of our national leadership and population generally lack a shared vision for the future.

M7 has done a lot of things to Ugandans and since we are not yet angry enough to produce a solution to counter him, then I guess we can let the ABIRIGAS have their way until such a time we all will wake up and he has nationalized even the little we have produced during his reign.

When a country lacks the glue that holds it together for a national cause, you need a rallying point that touches the nerve of every soul of that country to spark its consciousness and right now incrementally only M7 provides that opportunity to help stretch Uganda's patience to its elastic limit. Playing the "Devil's advocate" it is possible Uganda needs another 10 years of a M7 fundamental change he promised in 1986 so that we can all get angry enough to collectively including all sham religious and cultural leaders fix Uganda by uprooting the rotten foundation or simply press a restart button. In 10 years I will be 52 years if God let's me, I wonder how old you will be to make any meaningful contribution out of this current idleness.

The choice to be angry now or in 20 years is yours.

Remember, no matter how much you talk or write and do nothing about your aspirations, you are wasting your own time on missed opportunities. You can write, talk about your thoughts and ideas to find clarity BUT you must act smart as well to complete the equation for the intended effect. Some opportunities have to be created while others have to be discovered from deep beneath the unthinkable.

There are going to be more days you will feel your life is under the weight of a rock because of the many wasted opportunities in your life. Some wasted opportunities could have been missed by your parents, those professional in whom you have put your trust or yourself along the way. Take responsibility and corrective action. Fix it now.

Opportunities missed rarely turn around. You must prepare to seize opportunity on your first chance. We have so many distractions because most times we find solace in our social groups or think it is someone else responsible for our predicament. While some distractions are self inflicted, others are people you think are friends when in fact are just a drag force decelerating ones momentum. You must disentangle oneself from distractions, write or talk about your thoughts to form better clarity of aspirations but make effort to make those a reality. The thought process helps inform the plan and execution and all require efficiency and effectiveness. As you can see, it is all hard work. Life is a lot of hard work my friends. It will get even more difficult than this but that is what life is all about. Hard work. Mzee Kabulasoke in Church today.

Why are people pushing laws to deny M7 a chance in the very judicial institutions he assigned to the Steven Kavuma's well knowing he was doing the "right" thing? I highly doubt Mr.Museveni has committed any crimes in the last 32 years unless a thorough investigation discovers something hidden from the public and requires sanctioning.

That is how public institutions work. For now we are working on assumptions unless the NRM MP knows something we all don't know.

The ANTI M7 PROSECUTION & RETIREMENT BILL will be redundant unless the bill lists all crimes that Mr.Museveni must not be tried for. What if in retirement M7 commits murder or rape? Must crimes in retirement also be forgiven in advance? If the bill is not a red ploy, it must list all crimes committed and investigated by the very institutions he has built over 32 years. Before we move forward he would have to publicly acknowledge them and apologise then the bill can become law.

Prosecution is not a bad thing if someone knows he was doing the right thing and in public interests and those very judicial institutions should hand M7 his freedom based on the facts.

There is something strange about this AGE LIMIT thing and the NO PROSECUTION BILL.

If Mr.Museveni has not committed any crimes when executing his functions as President then he has no reason to fear prosecution. If he as President built judicial institutions with his friends like KAVUMA, then he should not even worry to get justice if taken to the very competent judicial institutions he built. If however he has committed any crimes then subjecting him and his network to the same institutions will strengthen these institutions and also deter others from abusing public office held in trust.

The forceful LAND ACQUISITION campaign suddenly was ruthlessly replaced by the forceful AGE LIMIT removal. The intensity, timing and speed in sections of the 450 rotten Parliament was stampeding.

The beneficiary of the AGE bottleneck abandoned the LAND or PROPERTY project because it was a RED PLOY anyway his own stooges in parliament were unwilling to call off as it would put them directly in the bulls eye for future blackmail.

The AGE LIMIT removal is also another RED PLOY in an increasingly small spectrum of options. He wants to say, " I wanted to grab land and you refused, I want to stay and you still refused. Now I want my son to be my successor. Otherwise if not my son, my army takes over".

We reject all of these. Age limit must stay. No son, no brother, no wife as successor. We want you to clean up, pack up and go home peacefully so we can rebuild the country with a new approach.

Symbolically, by M7 calling out ABIRIGA during a State of Nation address, he gave him the lee-way, endorsed his mental illness to do exactly what both are doing to the country.

So the ABIRIGAS now know, like their Boss under protection they can "CUCU" on anyone, anywhere, at anytime as the rest of us just look on.

Meanwhile, the poor police man or soldier whose job is to guard the Constitution is instead guarding the "CUCULER" and has to salute as they do their thing, clobber skulls of their fellow poor cousins protesting the abuse of power in exchange for a small token.

We are a country that lost its soul and consciousness. A country where men lost their pride in pursuing that ambition of being their own master rather than serving a master until they go to the grave.

" I have always wanted to be my own master and not the master of others"

As they kill women all over the country, the police is busy guarding those who feel they can "CUCU" on anyone anywhere at any time.

After feeding them for 32 years, all they can do is "CUCU" on the country and if you think they won't POO POO on you, come take my cheap shoes.

First of all no rivers of tears will stop the wanton abuse, violence and wastage of human life from Museveni, his family and his support staff in his quest to form a constitutional monarch. The only counter to this violence is to decisively opting to make violence risky for those used to it as their only option. In 5 years, the NRA war killed more than 500,000 Ugandans. Has anyone provided statistics of how many were killed in the 20 year war theatre in the North? Of course they blamed Kony except NRA. They blamed Mumbere in the massacre of Kasese. They always blame others for their own violence.

I have read comments from NRM apologists accusing unarmed opposition MPs of violence. NRM accused Acholis and Langis of being savages to a point of turning the entire South against the North. Now the entire country is starting to gradually transfer the savage adjective to the South. Gradually, Dr. Obote and Amin who Museveni referred to as "swines" in his messianic diatribe are starting to look like saints. Why?

Some of the commentators of course have relatives working for the regime either as security operatives, UPDF officers, Police men, or political grasshoppers. To them anything that threatens the power center in Kampala threatens their very existence. To many, living off the state is now a right. It is not about democracy or the good of country. They are motivated by their current relative position of comfort and nothing else matters.

Now you know why Kings, Bishops, Apostles and Prophets are quiet. They are part and parcel of the current political equation in a symbiotic relationship of mutual perpetuation. They are eating with those who control the instruments of coercion.

In 1981, when NRA started a rebellion, those who controlled power at the time stood in the same predicament of fear and the threat and reality of loss of power compromised their ability to avert greater violence. NRA was by the way part and parcel of the UNLA/M power structure until the architect of violence excused himself for losing an election and resorted to violence in Luwero. So the violence in Uganda today has not started today because the opposition has worn red ribbons to oppose the defacing of the Constitution. It is the culture of NRM/A.

I have lived long enough to know the history of violence and the authors and architect of violence in Uganda and the region.

In 1981-1986 NRA waged a violent war against the UPC government and the UNLA, a war that left more than 500,000 Ugandans dead.

NRA waged war on grounds the 1980 elections had been rigged. UNLA predominantly dominated by the Acholi and Langi was accused of extra judicial executions, like we witnessed in Kasese recently. It was accused of abductions like many of us have been victim of State inspired abductions under this regime. From 1986 to 2006 NRA/UPDF waged another campaign of violence in the North against an armed opposition because the civil opposition had been placed under abeyance by Executive Order One and extended by the 1995 Constitution until 2000.

The opposition is not armed. The opposition and its supporters are up against a violent regime that will never know any other way but violence. It's response to a determined opposition is violence.

NRM cannot win any more support from the population. It does not matter how much violence it mets on the population, eventually the people will realize that the only response to effectively regain their country is to dismantle the current infrastructure of violence.

It is understandable for many who live in fear today. Those however who feel unbothered by the unfolding events like many other events that should have re-awakened all of us into a unity of purpose to call the regime to order, should know that this will not get better. It is going to get worse and even those unbothered today will wake up one morning to the reality of their delusion.

If you feel exhausted by the current political environment there are not many options. Freedom is a tough choice. There is no alcohol regulation in Uganda. If you want to pursue your freedom, the choices are tougher and there is no easy path. But you have to make the tough choices to either stand up or get on your knees forever.

But the attempt to call the opposition violent or uncivil is the most non-intelligible opium NRM operatives especially those who feed off the state would very much love the public to buy-in. It is shameful lack of creativity.

NRA claimed UNLA was violent. NRA claimed Holy Spirit Movement and Lord Resistance Army were violent. NRA accused West Nile Bank Front of violence. NRA accused UPDA and ADF of violence and in all except NRA/M.

The author and architect of violence is non other than Museveni and those who believe, support his ideology of violence. AND there is no other way around this ideology but to counter the violence. No buckets or rivers of tears will solve NRM and Museveni's high appetite for power and violence but a collective national response that stands up and counters this problem. I repeat no amount of tears or wailing will stop this problem but a collective, synchronized national response that counters the violence we have witnessed in Uganda for more than 40 years from these people.

VERDICT: Dr Muniini Mulera finds Uganda GUILTY.

- _That Constitution gave the President enormous power, basically to run the country on his own. It was not Museveni who wrote that Constitution. Yes, he pushed and manipulated from behind the scenes, but he did not have the means to force people to vote for what they did not believe in. To blame Museveni for the decisions that people made in that Constituent Assembly is to absolve them of personal responsibility for their actions._

- _Likewise, Museveni is not solely responsible for the State violence and rigging and all manner of harassment that have been the hallmark of the presidential elections since 1996. Not once, as far as one can tell, has Museveni personally caned, teargassed, arrested or otherwise harassed an opponent. Not once has he stuffed ballot boxes or changed voting tallies to subvert the people's will. These criminal acts have always been committed by Ugandan citizens of sound mind, some in uniforms of armed services that have sworn to defend a Constitution that confers broad freedoms on citizens. That they have chosen to sell their souls in exchange for cash or jobs and other patronage offerings is not Museveni's fault. It is their fault._

- _Who lifted the term limits in 2005? It was not Museveni. He was not an MP. It was a group of people who were willing to take miserable Shs5 million to betray themselves, their children and posterity._

- _Now we have the latest episode, with Museveni still determined to remain on his throne until death, as is the right of all kings. Have you heard him threaten or otherwise harass anyone who is opposed to the age limit scam? Was he not in New York when so-called honourable men and women were falling over each in demonstrating their total disregard for our dark history? No! Do not blame Museveni for the scam, for he cannot force anyone to do anything._

- _He is a man who chose to be king, but he did not make himself king. He has chosen to remain king, but that will only be possible if men and women in and outside Parliament choose to endorse his plan through their actions or inaction. That includes you Tingasiga. The President must carry his own moral cross and the guilt of betrayal of numerous comrades who gave their lives believing that theirs was a struggle for freedom for all Ugandans. However, he must not be held responsible for the actions of citizens who have continued to make his dream of a life presidency possible. We all must choose where we stand on the critical question before us. And live with our choice._

The Church has to define its role and mission in society, without ambiguity, if its to remain relevant. The faithfuls want leaders who can inspire them with the truth by speaking truth to power. Prophet Samuel spoke truth to King Saul and David when they disobeyed God. When do our modern Prophets speak truth to power?

The Church and Cultural institutions have been fused since the Roman times. And the relationship remained close since the colonial times in Africa because these are power centers. The Church has continued to give the CORRUPT POLITICIAN more prominence with front seats because of his immense power and the envelop of stolen money from the very poor in the Church because Religious leaders are conflicted in their spiritual mission and their personal material needs.

Sometimes the very politicians who abuse the very citizens are given roles in the Church including collecting offertory bags. The Church accepts stolen money from these very politicians. Church leaders accept gifts from politicians engaged in mass murder of citizens. Religious leaders wine and dine with those who defile and rape the National Constitution sometimes stammering just to avoid losing their customers. The Church wants gifts from the corrupt at same time it wants offertory from its poor flock by aggregating the small amounts from large numbers.

The Church continues to demand that the ordinary folk remains calm while worshiping their political partners who unleash turmoil to the poor. Oh, they condone stolen elections because the politician will continue doling out gifts to the Church men.

People go to church to find healing and build their communities. They bring sacrifices to God because they have faith in God but those who minister the word must be exemplary. The teachings of Christ are not the teachings of these Bishops, Apostles, Pastors, Sheikhs, Prophets of our time.

I am a difficult student, I have been a difficult congregant and I refuse double sided people. If the Church cannot speak truth to power, then it has lost its relevancy. The people can pray from their homes. If cultural institutions cannot be on the side of the people, then the people are on their own. If we cannot speak up and openly then everyone must remain in their domain.

I speak to you yee men, that if the Church cannot be on your side, then you can stay at home and pray with your family. Pay your offertory to your family, buy a lamb and make your sacrifices to God from your homes. We must reject hypocrisy wherever it rears its ugly head..

"Now that their mother has died, how are these children going to survive?" One of the moarners sobbed.

This was 1998 when my old woman passed on. We have fought and even literary killed off lions previously much feared by our own.

Uganda like most children is bound to lose her parents. AND like many orphans Uganda will even out perform expectations of change constrainers. The natural progression to time is a reality of change that can't be constrained.

It's natural for people to fear change including the uncertainty of losing someone who has been a source of livelihood, a distributor of political goodies to his wonderful political children.

What most of the moarners did not know then is that as a family we had innately developed capacity to embrace change and create opportunities in our own space to survive and match on no matter the difficulty like all people do when circumstances demand so.

Our mother's career which had kept her away for long in war zones had developed our independence into our own individuals we are today to the chagrin of new soldiers unused to these kind of people.

Uganda is in the same zone now. Those afraid Uganda cannot do without them are grossly naive. Uganda is literary already an orphan waiting to take on life its own way. The reason am telling this story is because there are many orphans out there who have been able to overcome what they feared most and more people are bound to become orphans quite naturally.

So the ailing men and women who think Uganda can't live without them should be more realistic. Just let go and Uganda will innovate, dial its collective creativity knowing its reality and shall emerge from those small to bigger footprints.

My mother just spoke very few things to me that have inspired me all my life and that is all I needed. To be told I could be anything if I put my mind to it. Young people need leaders who keep their word for inspiration not those who only tell the truth by accident and change goal posts at every bend and turn.

In summary, Uganda very soon will be properly orphaned but make no mistake, Uganda can and will always outlive anyone and the fantasy that Uganda can't live without some people is just too much fantasy.

It takes a lot of work to get a well grounded man or woman from a broken child from a broken home going to a broken school system in a broken society. If teachers are not happy by the way the country has treated them, it is largely because the products of their effort for years lack the knowledge and skill to produce a better version of the country they espouse. You reap what you sow.

Teaching people how to pass exams as a short cut to good life without grounding in ethics for quality and hard work produces the mass political convulsion without any sense of strategic direction.

Look around and tell me you are proud of the people around you.

We are a product of our education system and where we come from; very horrible broken homes and communities.

It takes a lot of work to get a well grounded man from broken child from a broken home going to a broken school system.

So Museveni feels insecure going home. Of course, he would wish to go as long as whoever comes in can guarantee protection of his ego and his family from retribution. Truth is after 30 years in power, he has performed dismally against his 1986 Messianic grandeur of "This is not a mere change of guards but a fundamental change".

So while he thinks the mood in the country is foul for any member of his family to succeed him he is convinced none is prepared enough against the mobilizing factors counter to his monarchical intentions thus he is also conflicted in wanting to stay just in case Ugandans can stupidly put up with his convoluted schemes.

The family dynasty is therefore set up against Uganda. 3 years shy of a 35 year reign with blood flowing all around the country and the region, public resources squandered, the family has no idea where to go and the best bet is test fate with the extension of a ruler ship that has missed opportunities to make a grand history worth the memories of many generations thanks to the extensible patience of Ugandans.

Ideally, Museveni thinks his insurance policy from retribution is his son in charge of the UPDF having edged out old soldiers who feel betrayed and filled it with young and unambitious soldiers whose only obsession is money. His brother and relatives all over occupying security installations and Wife of course in cabinet meetings the husband chairs are a demonstration of a man and a family hell bent on bending everyone over. Then there are “Bag men” like Ruhakana Rugunda and all tribes elderly men and women just in to get their piece of the Ugandan carcass.

Where would Ofwono Opondo for instance find a job in Uganda without Museveni? We must be realistic about some of these people. I know a political scientist who came back to Uganda after 7 years in Washington and could not fit into the work ethic to earn a genuine wage after supplying his labor. He tried all over Kampala calling his father's and brother's patronage network of political contacts so he could find a job as a regime operative in order to earn cheap money. This is how these people are. So without public agitation and the will from Ugandans to run mad and threaten to destroy every nascent infrastructure in the country, Mr. Museveni has no incentive to retire when boys he helped through killing fields of their own people on their way to power in Zaire, Rwanda, Burundi and South Sudan are consolidating their own versions of kleptomania in their filthy capitals. In Zaire, some boy has refused to even hold elections and stayed put in the Presidential palace. The camaraderie in Nairobi saw Kenyatta's son stealing an election the same way Mr. Museveni has been organizing his sham elections in Kampala for donkey years. In Rwanda, his other former support staff just strengthened his grip on power possibly until 2034. In Burundi and S. Sudan lumpens don't care which child starves to death or woman is raped as long as they occupy the Presidential palace.

Africa in general, therefore has failed itself internally. We could forgive the Amin's and Bokasas of the 1970s for their modest education but the crop of current elite is just genetically greedy and strategically clueless. Promising a "fundamental change" 32 years ago after walking over more than 500,000 lives of your citizens dead and turning out to be the most corrupt and power hungry despot is just bizzare. Hello, that is Africa and Uganda to be particular.

If Uganda helped Rwanda get rid of Gen. Habyarimana in 1994, Zaire get rid of Mobutu in 1996, helped S. Sudan gain independence from Khartoum and helped Burundi negotiate a peace deal in Arusha and instead established a string of ruthless and uncultured autocrats all over the region while entrenching their heart beat in Kampala, we might be back full circle to undo everything starting all over again from Uganda.

The AGE LIMIT removal is the clearest demonstration that Mr. Museveni and his entire family are very ungrateful people.

If Ugandans summon their guts and say enough is enough and choose to bring everything to halt including the country in an attempt to uproot Museveni from power; it will be a complete fundamental change Museveni promised in 1986.

“I noticed the indisciplined, arrogant but uninformed way in which the group conducted themselves.

The security services have showed me a statement ascribed to Bobie Wine” Extracts from M7’s story as he goes on to answer Bobie Wine.

1. M7 is obviously an arrogant fellow used to pushing around everyone in his court yard like palace surfs of the old Kingdom of Mesopotamia. Him and his security service experts cannot fathom anyone calling him in particular and his entire infrastructure to order. The people close to him cannot imagine there are Ugandans who are capable of summoning some healthy degree of impartiality and give him and his government a fair assessment which quite frankly those conflicted by their speculative economic interests will find unbelievable. And why should security service people be taking news paper reports to Mr. Museveni when Uganda has hired for him a well paid Press Secretary and a full Communications Department? It is obvious there are people on the fringes of society who literary worship Museveni and have concluded he should be the true “Last King of Scotland” because they find his jokes funny for lack of alternatives or limited options.

2. In 1986 M7 suspended the Constitution and led the Country for 10 years without the inconvenience of the Constitution. He was the defacto law and head of every institution in Uganda.

3. In 1995 a new Constitution was born. M7 accepted the terms of that Constitution and in 1996 at Kololo swore to defend, protect and guard the baby Constitution of the Republic.

4. 2005, just 10 years later having sworn again in 2001 to defend, protect and guard the baby

Constitution, paid NRM MP to rip open, defile a 10 year old Constitution by removing Presidential Term Limits.

5. 2017, just 3 years before he makes 35 years holding the country at ransom with his nomadic economic policies, he again want to remove the age limit and for what?

6. What has Uganda achieved by Museveni treating the Constitution like his toilet paper? If Museveni thinks Bobi Wine and his supporters are indisciplined, arrogant and uninformed then he should effective immediately look in a very large mirror and he will see who he is talking about.

“My security services people bring me news reports ascribed to Robert Shaka” M7 retorts in his letters. What kind of people vend misinformation as a profession? Unfortunately, you are gradually running out of options and you have one way out of the field.

When we were busy in school developing careers, some of you I remember were just idling in alcohol, show biz and banking on the empty political connections of your parents in a poor country.

Uganda is a poor country and no matter the web of connections, the population is trapped in poverty if the regime cannot expand the economy in a smart way.

See, now you have morphed into informal vendors of misinformation(informers) as a profession.

I can imagine the security service people pulling the hairy ear lobe of the old man and they go like “Mzee wake up, see what TVO has written Mazima. We suspect he is ROBERT SHAKA. We have been investigating this man for 5 years and much as there is no evidence we are about to concoct it and we are sure he is the one, Mzee.

Even Andrew Mwenda, the brother to Brig.Moses Kayanja also confirmed in his independent magazine that indeed we are on the money with this man”.

Honestly, I really feel for most of you. It is not going to get any easier. In fact it is going to get worse.

BTW, I am now retired. Do not interrupt my retirement in my village because I can't help you much anymore.

Presidential TERM or AGE LIMITS are like SPEED LIMIT on Masaka Road or installed SPEED GOVERNORS in cars. You don't remove speed limits on the roads OR uninstall speed governors from cars just because one driver claims he is good so he can bribe the cops to ignore or dismantle the rules. In some societies, people caught violating DUI regulations have interlock Car Breathalyzers to ensure the driver cannot start his car when his blood has alcohol and the laws are crafted fundamentally to save lives.

From 2001, I drove on Kampala-Bugiri-Tororo road sometimes through Mbale via Tirinyi for 10 years and can't tell you how many dead bodies I saw on that road in grisly accidents. Even with humps, the carnage of road accidents never stopped. As for Masaka road, am told the name has been changed to "massacre" road for the deaths of innocent lives that simply has defied any logic.

It is true Ugandans have very little value for human life as we gradually evolve into a society of "MAN EAT MAN & DOG EAT DOG". But society must be run on laws because laws transform society and its culture.

The transformation of the Ugandan society must be deliberate with the people at the core of any shared vision. The leaders must galvanize the fundamental pillars of society among which is the law. No single person or group of persons should take the law to be a mere INCONVENIENCE only applicable to the lowly in society. The law transforms society and culture if and when applied consistently, punitively and fairly. You cannot transform society by making laws that are only applicable to a section of society while others live outside the constraints of the law as governors.

Technically, you cannot make a constitution that is changed to suit the interests of a family, a single leader and his friends and family and you think you are transforming society. It defies every basic tenet of common sense. You don't remove speed limits simply because someone thinks he is a good driver. Okay?

Anyway, I don't know who groomed some of you people. In my 42 years, I have never listened to a society that is devoid of common sense like this one. It is like everyone has lost hope and want the thing sold off so he gets his share of the inheritance. Just common sense. But you hear an old bearded man like RUHAKANA RUGUNDA talking and you wonder which illegal substance he is into lately. What is it that Uganda did to people like Rugunda to be this ungrateful to society? I used to hear people say "BAKIGA ARE VERY BRAVE & PRINCIPLED PEOPLE" who speak the TRUTH with BOLDNESS.

Let me take my drink at Nalongo's.

I have not been into competing to be like other people but my better version of an “old African man”.

I am a proud “old African man”. I am proud because I want to protect the dignity of the African man. I am not perfect. But deep inside my veins is the blood of bravery from my forefathers who gave me the name “SHAKA”.

When on the bus or taxi, I choose to be humble. I choose to listen and talk less. I choose to reach a news paper or a book. Because, my young brothers and sisters want to be heard. I have had my chance to be heard, I want them to be heard to. They have more unanswered questions and fears than my own. If I die today, I want to be remembered as a modest man who kept the honor and dignity of an “old African man”.

If I live for another 40 years, I will use the remaining part of my life to share my experiences to young African men and women because there is a reward for keeping the course. Truth is I have been very lucky. At 42, I have been given opportunity by the world. I have sat on the table with King’s and their advisors and listened to their plans. Hmmm. And I have chosen to remain the “old African man”. The African young man and woman needs to thirst for more knowledge, integrity, knuck for discovery and quest to solve problems. It is not enough to be fluent in a foreign language & information broadcasting but the fluency in the science of exploration and discovery to solve society’s problems. The World is moving at a supersonic speed and will not wait. Don’t get comfortable for you don’t have time to celebrate modest milestones for a very long time.

So, in all we do let's learn to be grateful. Africa is dying inside or is distracted because we all choose to fight the wrong wars against ourselves. We choose to stand high up in the mountain and condemn our very own down in the valley who need our compassion.

It is not going to get easier until we all dial deep inside to the awareness that we are all children of "Mother Africa" and we must treat one another with dignity so we can earn our respect from those who look down upon us for what we do to each other. We must earn our respect in the world but that will depend on whether we choose to act by treating each other with respect and dignity.

I must say I have been a very lucky "old African man". As the sun that beat my wobbly young legs back then as a little boy pounds my aging frame, I look back and am proud I never sold a single soul of my own for 30 pieces of silver.

Always remember, you are your brother's keeper.

Most people want to take action ONLY in times of crisis. In times of crisis we operate in fright mode with a deadly dose of adrenaline. Until their nest is rattled, they will believe it is not yet time to act.

It is human. Most people want to start a business after they have lost a job. Others will only start questioning the politics only when they fail to pay fees for their children, husband gets fired from his job or insecurity knocks on their door.

Act when in situations of relative comfort. Invest when comfortable. Get involved when relatively comfortable.

Don't wait to plan and act only under emergency conditions for then the plan has not been tested for effectiveness. You can't choose to invest in times of mental crisis simply because you have been fired from your comfortable job.

Always remember, planning is very important in all this. It involves timely decision making.

All this AGE LIMIT panic is a function of lack of central planning. It is driven by trial and error economic policies.

That look of betrayal on a man's face. I spent 3 years with this General between 1982-1985. Oh daring the man was. If the ranks & the medals he dishes out like KATUNKUMA were genuine, Matayo would have been Lt. General way back when the Tinyefunzas, Tumwiines, Rwigyemas, and Muntu's became Generals. But the Matayos and the likes of the Kashillingis, Besigyees and Col. Fred Bogeres of this world were in the second tier category and forced to live under the shade of the big tree to survive. The entire set up was rigged from the start & and one man choreographed his plot thanks to the naivety of youth so many. Their arrival in Kampala, the basic material entitlements, vehicles and escorts following gave them a sense of power and grandeur relative to the ordinary folk. The real deal slipped under as their time waned and the master re-configured the structure under their watch for fear of losing the basic material entitlements. Ambition is such a big thing and brings out the national character of a country.

So Poor Matayo has spent centuries as a Brigadier until recently shipped off to Bujumbura as his permanent outpost. Bujumbura!!!!

I don't know how one can send me to Bujumbura for 10 years. They have all grown frail after their youth sucked dry. They own no factories. They have no built industries. Some like Kahinda Otafiire are sugar importers and promoters of "Age Limit" campaign. Others are owners of Taxis and Boda Boda's. What a fundamental change!!!

They were heroes in their youth. They were gallant in their time. Unfortunately, many now can't talk in their golden days because they are on their master's life support machine.

They were daring in their youth. They were betrayed & chose to remain silent.

As a General I refuse the life support machine. It is a rusty life support machine which can give me political tetanus.

Removal of PRESIDENTIAL & AGE LIMIT symbolically means a FALSE START on the little girls shoulder bones, young back and wobbly legs. You all have children and or plan to have some. The moment you give them a false start in life when you could afford building them a firm foundation, you have screwed them over and may never pull through. We have seen all these things in our communities.

By not defending the Constitution from those who defile and rape it whenever they feel “inconvenienced”, internally moving forward, we and our children are all going to carry the national burden for a very long time.

Like our parents failed to restrain the current culture of "Musevenism" way back before it became malignant, we are responsible for failing to deal with this problem firmly and like a debt, we shall pay starting now into the force-able future.

All of us including those currently supporting the removal of article 102(b). Those who supported the removal of article 105 on Presidential Term Limits are suffering with all of us and have no clue how to reverse the costly decision for which they were paid 30 pieces of silver.

We are in this together. You can support wrong decisions today because you think it favors your current false sense of comfort, but make no mistake, there are those who regret so badly having supported the removal of Presidential Term Limits.

Make no mistake, your little girls and boys, will be carrying this burden on their little shoulders and for those who look up to children as their INSURANCE POLICY in old age, a false start on those small should bones, wobbly legs and back burdened early in their lives means a false start in life and many rarely push through.

The sane must encourage and foster dialogue before the insane and angry take over power from NRM. When radicals take center stage, the rules of engagement are different and very dire. NRM radicals have exercised their violence against their opponents for while and like in all regimes radicals assume monopoly of violence.

Radicalism foments radicalism among victims of radicalism.

I have never advocated for violence but I have faced the brunt of radicals in NRM including an ABDUCTION and illegal detention. And I insist I must remain sane. But I can't stop the radicals with the exception of constantly calling for sanity.

NRM like the opposition has radicals and when the balance of power tilts from the moderates to the radicals. Ho ho ho, you are yet to see chaos people. It is happening gradually but surely.

Like the end came for the Roman Empire so shall NRM.

Those who have built and own something must encourage and demand dialogue and sanity before the angry insane who have nothing of their own over run Kampala.

In an environment where the insane and angry take over government, those who have will be forced under their beds. It has happened before and all signs show, we are heading back.

When Amama Mbabazi aspired to be President of some poor country, Andrew Mwenda started a program called News Night on NTV. Paid of course as a project. He used the program to tell the world how a non starter Amama Mbabazi was. Reminded his audience how he met Bill Gates on an escalator in a shopping Mall. But it is difficult to understand why Andrew Mwenda quite frankly who has met Warren Buffet, knows all the right people as far as Stanford and music notes to be the best footballer, political candidate, neural scientists, business man, electricity tariff Expert or oil Agreement negotiator, cannot afford for once to stand stand for President and save the world from self destruction to a point where he might remain the only Ugandan alive after we have all departed since we don't know what is left or right at a crosswalk.

Why does he seem to jump at everyone who tries to dream big like they have to sit his exam in order to have a chance in life to go to the next level? Why does he seem he'll bent on stopping everyone who tries to learn how to raise their voice to be heard?

Of course the sham election came in 2016, M7 lost it even after doing everything to stop Amama Mbabazi and Besigye using the Police and Security apparatus. Yes, remember the Late AIGP FELIX KAWEESI the man, push Amama into a Police pick up at Nile Breweries? Andrew Mwenda said it is good for Amama Mbabazi to be captured by Police for disobeying the Public Order Management Law. He now supports the removal of AGE LIMIT because Amama is silently in his bunker in Kololo. Right ? Then came the build up of the UBC Land Scandal under scrutiny by Parliament. As Parliament kept pushing on with the corruption investigation, Andrew Mwenda came up with some clumsy explanation that corruption is good. He added there is no scientific evidence anywhere in the world corruption undermines development. To back up his argument he said a corrupt official can steal public money for a hospital and build a factory that creates jobs for sick and ailing people. The problem is not health but poverty. He signed off as Andrew Mwenda, thank you. We woke up one morning and the sister Margaret Muhanga was in Parliament explaining how she sold a goat, yes just one goat at $3M and bought UBC

Land. Of course, corruption is good says Mwenda. The UBC Land scandal like many others cannot see the light of day since Andrew Mwenda says corruption is okay and fuels development instead. Have you heard Muhanga in court for uttering false documents or conspiring to fraudulently take ownership of a public asset?

Andrew Mwenda during the recent Kasese massacre came out guns blazing defending security forces for mass execution of the Bakonjo and desecrating the Rwenzururu Kingdom palace under the banner of self defense. Of course he has cheer leaders among his circles of friends. What options do they have honestly when one convinced his worshipers that they are good for nothing lot except him. He accused the late Akena for knocking Kanyamunyu's Car. He defended Bob Kasango for diddling money either from Government departments or clients. He is rabid loyalty , I tell you .He is now thinking of how to defend Paul Kagame for locking up a former Presidential aspirant in Kigali.

Having defended corruption as good for development, Andrew Mwenda came back to Parliament after months of quarreling with FDC "radicals" and "extremists" to defend what's dubbed the “Golden OIL HANDSHAKE”. He went to Parliament and was seen answering questions from Hon.Abdul Katuntu about the 6BN/- the President dolled out to his supporters. He again came up to defend Sudir Ruparelia accused by Bank of Uganda for siphoning $100m from Crane Bank because to him Sudir was not only a friend but also had many adverts of Crane Bank coming through to his Independent Magazine. Sudir and Mwenda were effectively friends with mutual benefits. Loyalty there I give it him.

Then came Dr.Stella Nyanzi squaring up with Mrs.Janet Museveni and her husband over the “Buttocks” case. Andrew Mwenda, the defender again came up and wrote a winding analysis of why Dr.Stella Nyanzi and him were in the same class at Makerere University where he remembers he was a top notch student and Stella was also right behind him. Same thread of attention seeking syndrome that require serious medical attention.

Over the years, Andrew Mwenda has been having episodes of bashing Rtd.Col.Kizza Besigye having been ignored by Amama Mbabazi. By the way, Andrew Mwenda also quarreled with Tom Voltaire Okwalinga(TVO) after failing to feel whether he had won the contest between him and TVO. In a crazy rage he decided to look for someone or a group of people he thinks are TVO; ROBERT SHAKA , ABBEY SEMUWEMBA & HENRY LUGASIRA were not spared by his scotch earth policy of search and destroy. The shadow boxing between heavy weight Andrew and TVO was not giving him the shine.

But Andrew Mwenda also had quarrels with Agha Khan. Way before he resigned he went kukus calling Agha Khan names for restraining him inside the Monitor editorial boardroom.

NOW, Andrew Mwenda has started on BOBI WINE. He says Bobi is only good at singing. The million dollar question; what is Andrew Mwenda good at? Is he a farmer, industrialist, banker, nuclear scientist, politician or software developer?

What wrong has BOBI WINE committed for Andrew Mwenda now also to pick a bone with him? Let us assume for once all these people including M7 are wrong as Andrew Mwenda has spent his entire career preaching to all of us and he is right. Why can't Andrew Mwenda pick nomination forms whether for Parliament or President and save us from our horrible selves?

He could even lead a rebellion and take the crown of being the second successful guerrilla leader after his now role models; Museveni and Kagame.

Kale, if M7 had not tinkered with the Constitution in 2005 and handed over power in 2006 at Kololo ,people would not be dying senselessly like grasshoppers.

The Kasese massacre would not have happened.

Even Brig. Elwelu possibly would not be a Maj.General just to compensate for his guilt.

The young people executed by security forces in the Kayunga riots in 2009, the Kasubi info demonstrations in 2010, the mass executions of youths during walk to work in 2011 would not have happened?

Where will you people run to when your time comes to go? I can imagine the Airport closed, borders closed to ensure none of their ilk escaped justice. Fellow Ugandans, do everything possible to resist the REMOVAL OF AGE LIMIT.

The longer these people stay in power the more deaths we are going to witness. I doubt even AIGP.ANDREW FELIX KAWEESI would have been assassinated if M7 had left power in 2006. These are all consequences of a leader wanting to rule for life.

Now M7 admires Robert Mugabe. He is like if Mugabe can screw up Harare, I can screw up Kampala.

If they insist and impose themselves on the population defy, until they are shown the door and eventually paraded in court to answer for treason. Never again allow a criminal President or his group of people to run to exile. Prepare to close all Airports and borders when the time is ripe so we all submit to the law of the time.

Why did M7 fight Habyarimana of Rwanda(1990-1994) or Mobutu of Zaire(1996) causing the death of more 6 million Africans knowing he would morph into the same brand of dictatorship he fought?

Mobutu had just made 32 years of experience in power the same time Museveni has made in Uganda and wants more. Many people have died and continue to die because of Museveni Messianic attitude. Since 1972, people have lost their lives because Museveni assumes as long as his mind is focused on power, then those who die in his mission are just mere collateral damage.

Museveni fought Zaire's Desire Kabila just one year after installing him as his puppet until the Angolans and Zimbabweans stopped the nonsense. Museveni even squared up with Paul Kagame in Goma and Kisangani after their imperial ambitions were frustrated by Angolans in Congo leading to senseless deaths of Rwandan, Ugandan troops and Congolese.

Museveni again plotted to destabilize Congo under Joseph Kabila using M23 in Goma and Eastern Congo Until South African and Tanzanian troops routed his rebel army across the Uganda border.

Museveni's philosophy is all about violence; murder and until the world wakes up to this reality, Uganda is going to wake up with a deadly blood bath that will shock the world.

Museveni walked over more than 500,000 Ugandans dead claiming dictatorship and extrajudicial execution of citizens. Spent more than 20 years in the fields of death in Northern Uganda quelling rebellions. Sparked another civil war in S.Sudan that has caused a humanitarian catastrophe to date.

And Museveni is not done. More and more young people whose hopes for a future are increasingly blurred continue to have their lives spilled senselessly because of his love for power.

How much blood of Africans or Ugandans in particular must be spilled just because of Museveni and his circle of friends?

See, if Museveni is good for Uganda so was Habyarimana for Rwanda and Mobutu for Zaire and there was no justification for the death of more than 1,000,000 million Rwandans and the more than 6 million Congolese who have lost their lives in the jungles of Congo since 1996.

Ugandans the writing is on the wall.

The weakness of the weak and poor is in their failure to identify their own and their procrastination in working together to counter their tormentors.

If you doubt my argument ask wakina Jet Mwebaze, James Kazini, Brig.Nobel Mayombo, Felix KAWEESI, there is this one whose name keeps jumping out of my memory; yes Aronda.

The savagery exercised by security operatives on opposition supporters today is not unique to the current regime in Kampala. Uganda witnessed extra judicial executions of unarmed civilians in the 1960s, 1970s, 1980s by those holding the gun and other instruments of coercion of the State. So indeed this invalidates the argument by Mr.Museveni in 1986 that this was not a mere change of guards. Unfortunately, it does not matter how long but regimes come to an end either by exhaustion, deliberate internal sabotage and or defiance from the population.

The British Colonial government built a colonial state by recruiting tribes far away from the center of power in Buganda as a containment strategy. It is how the Acholis, Langis and West Nilers found their way in command positions of the military and Intelligence Services while the Itesots held fort in the Uganda Police. The Uganda Police seemed more professional when they wore their navy-blue Uniform.

When Uganda attained independence in 1962, the post independence leaders were supposed to dismantle the colonial state and build a publicly accountable national State. Instead, they have all used the colonial policy of ethnic divide and rule to advance their selfish ethnic imperial political interests rather than foster national cohesion.

The Southerners and Buganda in particular who felt militarily and politically dominated led by Prof.Yusuf Lule & Mr.Museveni on one hand and Dr.Lutakome Kayiira of Uganda Freedom Movement wanted to end this stranglehold of the State by the North. Baganda who formed the bulk of the NRA work force(foot soldiers) were given political positions as the reward for their cooperation in the broadbased government in 1986. The WEST retained the MILITARY Command and Control neutralizing Buganda military units from Dr.Lutakoomo Kayira's UFM and internally keeping NRA Buganda army foot soldiers worn out fighting in the North and broken including their leader Dr.Kayiira gunned down in Kampala in 1987. So

Mr. Museveni effectively just re-branded and re-configured the State from its domination by the North/East and transferred it to his kins and Westerners.

Buganda was deliberately limited to a supportive role for fear of its numerical strength this the decapitation of its military influence with in the military structure of the current state. Buganda despite its numerical strength provides the bulk of support labor (a large section of Buganda is easy prey to the junta with poverty biting hard and its Land being bought off on the cheap by their former allies using public funds). Having broken the military and economic back of the North/East, more people from these regions after decades of poverty and war are willing to sell out to just to live by.

The Uganda State is effectively now a WESTERNER AFFAIR just like UNLA/M, UA were for the North/East and increasingly more even a family affair. Unfortunately, the growing public disgruntlement and internal pressure is going to widen the fault lines even in the Western axis, central to the continuity of the current ethnic state as we witnessed intra political feuds in the 1970s and 1980s. The execution of youths in Buganda, Kasese massacre or the recent police extra judicial executions are a consequence of the faults lines above with in recent allies against what was perceived to be the residual colonial state . It means the ethnic State which viewed the North/East as enemies conducting a 20 year military and economic siege is now desperate for new allies as its former allies in Buganda(Cultural Institutions, the Church and other opinions leaders) and the West increasingly become antagonistic and unpredictable. These intra regional tensions between former allies happened between West Nilers during Amin's time against the Acholis and Langis. The reverse was true when Obote and his kins wanted to purge West Nilers who they suspected to be supportive of then Army Commander Idd Amin.

The current police, army and intelligence formations and structures clearly demonstrate that Mr.Museveni is no longer shy about building an ethnic State to protect himself and what he perceives to be his people. The SFC is an army with in an army. Police cadets coming out fresh from training and deployment are highly decorated and clearly come from the same region. People in charge of the UPDF, all Intelligence Agencies, The Police and all its Departments, Regional Police Commanders and DPCs are like cousins from the same village.Even the ELECTORAL COMMISSION from Kampala to all districts is a WESTERNER AFFAIR. 80% of all District Returning Officers come from the same region.

Does it surprise you that they are brutal in quelling demonstrations or organizing sham elections? Are the extra judicial executions by security service men today different from those of the past? Is not the State abducting and illegally detaining citizens ? So the claim by Museveni that this was fundamental change rather than a mere change of guards is a flawed argument just like his prognosis that Africa's problems are leaders who stay in power.

We changed guards from the North/East to the West. And quite frankly both guards are doing exactly the same. They are brutal, they engage in extra judicial executions of citizens and preside over a corrupt state. We accused the Okellos then of being illiterate and running a criminal state, but our educated elite manning the state today are doing exactly the same like their illiterate predecessors.

And if there were compelling grounds to disarm the State from the North/East then there are grounds to disarm the State from the West as well and build a national rather than an ethnic state.

Now I must say, there are no easy solutions but to counter the violence. You must engage the international community broadly and intensely through local diplomatic missions, locally mobilize the people to counter the regime. Those in the diaspora, you must do more to highlight and diplomatically engage Western Governments and the media on the plight of Ugandans.

The regime is rogue.

Uganda gave me more than I deserved. In 1926, Uganda welcomed my forefathers as teenagers looking for work.

They were given land from which to grow their food. Buganda Chiefs gave them herds of cattle to take care of on the farm and were able to lead productive lives. My grandparents worked on the farm and allowed to go back to Rwanda get their would be wives to have families. They were able to produce my parents who in turn gave me life. They were introduced to the Anglican Church in Buganda and learnt the culture of their communities.

While my grand parents and parents were not able to go far beyond the farm, Uganda gave me an education for which am forever grateful.

Uganda has capacity to give much more to her people and we must all give every young man and woman a chance to opportunity like I was. My patriotic duty to Uganda is to be a good citizen who advances the cause of her people. Ugandans are good people who must work to avoid destroying each other and the country in which all Ugandans have so much to gain working together and negotiating everything they disagree upon to find common ground.

I owe Uganda and her people everything and I shall forever be grateful for every opportunity the country gave my forefathers and myself. I have read, experienced and listened to my history and I have no choice but to be Patriotic about all my intentions. Uganda owes me nothing, I owe Uganda everything including my unwavering loyalty because am a grateful “old African man”.

July, 2015 am heading to court to answer fake charges brought against me by the fake Kaihura police and the phone rings while standing in front of my office.

“Hello Mr. Shaka. This is ACP. Baroza. The IGP would like to meet you.” The caller asked in a polite voice.

“Who is this again?” I asked as the convulted message rang in my head.

“This is ACP. Baroza, the Personal Assistant to the IGP, Gen. Kale Kaihura. I have been asked to call you and confirm an appointment with the IGP”.

“What is the matter? I am going to court over the fake charges by the police. Should I come with my lawyer after court?” I asked.

“Oh no, Lawyers politicize things. Just come alone. The General just wants to have a word with you.” Baroza went on.

“But I was in illegal detention on his orders at SIU for a week. Why did he not come meet me at SIU then? I will call you”. I politely ended the conversation.

I called my lawyer and informed him of the developments. I knew they wanted me in their dirty offices to record my voice and concoct a confession to the fake charges in court.

The General, a lawyer knew the matter was already in court and further discussions without my lawyer just did not make sense. But this is the same General who disobeys court orders and instead unleashes goons in the court room.

I called a friend of mine with knowledge of police internal workings and gave him the phone number the caller claiming to be a one Baroza had used to confirm identity and the Amigo with in minutes confirmed the phone number belonged to Baroza.

What a missed opportunity to rub shoulders with a fellow General. Blame this on my instinct not to trust anyone when my gut tells me so.

I am told some of my ABDUCTORS on June 8th, 2015 are now in dungeons wailing in horror. I intend to live long enough to see each one of them get justice. If your name is in my “black book” you have very little room to run except the following destination.

1.China

2. Russia
3. Eritrea
4. North Korea

Anywhere else, I will find you I promise.

There has been a lot of effort in exporting labor to the Middle East to stem the toxic youth unemployment as a safety valve. The videos of girls working as maids wailing for help on social media just make the whole policy or the lack of it even more confusing.

Apart from the UPDF that now officially is stationed in Mogadishu as skilled labor on security (who would want the Somalia project to end?), the national labor export policy is convoluted or lacking any strategic calculus. There was a story on exporting doctors to Bermuda Triangle or Trinidad that caused a lot of media attention as well before it was distracted by the AGE LIMIT REMOVAL.

Then yesterday the media reported Mr. Museveni talking about the education system and skills that are on demand in the Uganda labor market. It is not clear exactly what skills the Uganda economy or labor market really needs and in what quantity and quality given the over supply of workers amidst low demand thus the toxic youth unemployment reported to be in the range of 80%.

I am also not sure why Uganda must emphasize Uganda's small labor market knowing the economy cannot supply enough jobs when we can produce workers ready for the global labor market beyond the house girls we send to Dubai as hotel workers. If you train maids for the Uganda Market and then send them to Dubai they will find competence problems for the Arab market. Otherwise, train them for the global market that they hit the ground running anywhere including China.

Let's take an example. In 2015, 71% of the 85,000 quota of skilled H1-B non-immigrant workers program into the US labor market were from India. Majority of these were IT jobs, China came second at 7.9% and Canada third at 1.3% according to Forbes.

The H1-B visa program is the hallmark of every Indian IT company operating in the U.S with average annual wages at $100,000(350M/-). Civil servants complaining about salaries? Infosys, Wipro. Tata Consultancy, Tech Mahindra and HCL Technologies are the top Indian-owned companies importing foreign workers into the US labor market thanks to a powerful Indian lobby in Washington.

In fact, of the top 10 companies that petition for the 85,000 H1-B visas issued annually, five are Indian. Cognizant, Accenture, Amazon, IBM and Deloitte are the biggest U.S. users.

If India annually sends 60,000 skilled worker into the US job market each earning $100,000 on average for the next 20 years as Uganda competes with Burundi to send soldiers and maids to Arab countries; what are the two countries; India and Uganda doing differently?

If I was not retired, I would be scratching my head on what exactly our policy planners or lobbyist in Washington are paid for apart from the AGE LIMIT REMOVAL wizardry.

As it turns out, whether being President in Kampala, soldier in Somalia, police man in Nalufenya, a maid in Dubai or software Engineer in Silicon Valley, it is all about getting a decent jobs and keeping it.

How can a country pay a doctor a paltry UGX850,000 after 30 days of hard labor and counting days off the calendar to pay day?

How do you pay someone 850,000/- After 30 days of waiting and you make him wait for another 30 days to get 850,000/-. You people should be fair bambi. 30 days is a looong long time waiting waiting...

But Ugandans!!

850,000/- is equivalent to $250 a month and if this man has worked 8 hours a day for 30 days since there are constant emergencies with shortage of doctors you are talking about $250/30 or to make it computationally easier to calculate $$300/30 = \10 per day.

$10 for an 8 hour day translates into $1per hour which is 3500 per hour and 35,000 per day.

There is a problem.

Docto just refused to give me my last injection saying he is not doing voluntary work.

“I am a retired veteran” I insisted.

Amigo was in no mood for veteran talk.

But seriously, we are poor. Doctors, teachers, police men, soldiers, drivers, farmers, bankers name them. Everyone is just hustling.

I just limped my aging frame away back to my homestead.

Sente zafuuka aka sente. This poverty is not funny people.

Meanwhile we are heckling over AGE LIMIT REMOVAL.

We are a rare kind of special.

Looks after Paul Kagame got himself another 7 year term after bashing Nkurunziza, he created an atmosphere of uncertainty in Bujumbura and Kampala.

The narrative in Kampala now is that a 5 year term is too short even before the AGE LIMIT noise pollution is cleared out of the air.

Removal of AGE LIMIT in Kampala is motivating if God can grant one another 20 years of life. Why? It would help Museveni outlive Kagame in power if Kagame never changes his mind to remove Presidential Term Limits. There was Constitutional adulteration in Kigali recently am not sure what it was.

If Kagame chose to rule Rwanda for life which is now an open secret, it directly motivates Museveni to do the same in Kampala.

It is now an ego thing. Museveni is like if a recent Major in the Ugandan Army can screw his small country why not screw mine.

But there is fear in Kampala and Bujumbura what would happen without Museveni and Paul Kagame being the remaining strong man with real influence.

As for Kabila 1000s Miles far away in Kinshasa and Salva Kiir in Juba it is tough for the people of this region. Th ego fights simmering in the media between Kigali and Kampala are certainly about who lives longer and screws his people longer than the other and make history and the longest screw in the region.

It is regional supremacy reason why the EAST AFRICAN project is taunted by any megalomaniacs since their respective domestic fight have been “won” and its no longer a motivating factor.

December 5 2014, Daily Monitor reports Speaker Kadaga promising to pass the anti gay bill into law as a Christmas gift to Ugandans on her return from a Parliamentary Association Conference in Canada.

The anti gay bill which was a PRIVATE MEMBER'S BILL like the ANTI AGE LIMIT BILL, was given prominence by an NRM cadre and now State Minister for Planning DAVID BAHATI and Christians zealots in Pentecostal Churches and their benefactors in the political regime. It is easy to trace the hypocrisy of these people and it is terrible how forgetful Ugandans can be to see through this scam. Even the head of the Anglican Church who used to hush and puff about anti gay this, anti gay that went quiet. They abandoned their own crusade along the way. Why do people give up so easily? They are still quiet about the removal of the AGE LIMIT because this is how they survive.

KADAGA seeing the "popularity" around the anti gay bill wanted to steal the shine and violated parliamentary rules of procedures to pass the bill without quorum. An angry Museveni saw this as an attempt by KADAGA to pull off some political strings of her own come 2016 and during a press conference at State House, ranted in anger how Parliament could pass a law in total violation of parliamentary procedures. Typical Museveni suspected KADAGA of harboring political ambitions for the 2016 Presidential Elections.

Like KADAGA's love for cheap popularity, Museveni signed the anti gay bill into law after being persuaded by the NRM caucus that he would be a SOLE CANDIDATE despite knowing it was passed without quorum on the floor of Parliament. But Kadaga was like, many laws Mr. Museveni had signed had been passed without quorum and Museveni went ahead and signed them despite knowing the lack of quorum. What was Museveni complaining about this time round? See he signed the bill into law in a media frenzy during which he bashed the WEST for "pushing" down gay practices against what he calls African values. You remember his speech about "THEIR MOTHER'S SOMETHING SOMETHING?"

It was all populist stunt. It was just attention seeking posturing as he left instructions to his cadre judges to quash the law on his way for the US-Africa Summit in Washington where more donor money from the very GAY people he was condemning would flow from. AND guess what, the anti gay bill does not exist on Uganda's statutes not because it was meant to be. Since 2008, right after CHOGM, when DAVID BAHATI and his Christian zealots were hushing about the ANTI GAY movement, it was mere attention seeking from the international community and nothing to write home about this baboon called African morals.

It is ALWAYS just political posturing. Like the ANTI AGE LIMIT ammendment, the public consultations don't matter much. The political self interests of Mr.Museveni, KADAGA & GROUP is all that matters because the laws are not passed because of public interest.

Uganda would have an anti gay law on her statutes today because most Ugandans claim some obviously ambiguous African moral doctrine which they can't even define here nor there.

Ambition defines the urgency and agency with in you. Ambition defines the quality of who you think you are and where you are going. It clarifies your obstacles and prepares you for the journey to your horizons. Urgency is a function of your time from a reference point to a desired state.

The collective ambition of citizens brings out the national outlook of a community, society, State, country and nations.

Ambition defines the level of clarity of the line sight between ones current societal challenges and ones desired destiny. It brings out the relative level of comfort with ambiguity between individuals and nations.

Ambition distinguishes individuals, societies and nations from each other.

Life is biased enough already. No one is going to wake up the sleeping giant deep inside you.

Dial deep into your core and define your ambition and you will know why sometimes you feel trapped and helpless. But deep inside you, FEAR has made you settle for today's relative comfort for fear tells you this is the best version you will ever be.NO.

You must demonstrate that you are the potential of the better version your ambition espouses from your current version.

Fear suppresses or inhibits ambition. Submitting to fear is a one-way ticket to settling for the basic version you are because deep inside fear tells you, this is the very best you will ever be.

I conquered fear ONLY after retirement. Don't wait for retirement like me.

If I were a Doctor and I earn 3500/- an hour and 35,000/- a day, I would have laid down my toolbox. Stop being a spectator of the “negotiator” and join the negotiation.

What do you think this TOJIKWATAKO is all about? Someone wants a job for life where he can dictate how much grandeur to live on. He orders you around like little children. He uses his ill educated friends to change the rules and you toil with an old stethoscope and a white gown on low pay. Why waste your life on saving “cheap” lives?

And please stop thinking am not Patriotic because you have no idea. am a retired General. So I am just giving you advice on collective bargaining if you can't do it my way.

We must stop the habit of using people while others doing nothing are scavenging on society.

If you are a teacher and you make 250,000/- per month, a police man who makes 300,000/- a month, a civil servant who must steal Office stationary to make ends meet, lay down tools.

If you are a farmer who has failed to make ends meet while scrapping your land for wealth, stop sending food to Kampala. If Kampala people cannot pay for the real value of the food you supply to the city dweller, cut your supply of food to the city of Kampala. Until the poor farmer who toils all his life learns that as primary producers they can collectively demand more for their labor. Po-what? Poverty? Po-what? Poverty?

I have been told some teachers eat chalk due to hunger in this country. Please Teachers, stop eating chalk for lunch. Go home and farm your Land. This country does not appreciate what you do. Our society looks down upon the poor. Go get your share of the real national cake.

Why? It is time to be part of the negotiation.

All Ugandans must demand why others live like royalty in a poor country while the rest are forced to live like wild animals.

Join the conversation by withdrawing your cooperation to explore the power of collective bargaining.

If you are between 20-30 years and have resigned to fate for lack of a path to where you want to go; read this.

When you wake up and you are 50 years after 30 and 20 years respectively from today; behind you will be a trail of why you ought not to have given up early to despair.

Like you have heard from those who have presided over a BODA BODA Economy for 32 years, 30 years is too short for them to achieve the industrial economy they promised your aging parents 32 years ago. Your parents gave up early and I can tell you they are not proud of themselves for having set low ambitions for themselves.

These people say, 5 years after 32 years with a failed economy is too short a Presidential or a Parliamentary term to deliver a system that functions for everyone but themselves. Justices have even sworn affidavits to change their age to prevent them from going into retirement.

If you are between 20-35 today, this is your time to fix shit now even if it means bordering on costing your life.

That is how much is at stake.

When you see people fighting over 500/- like wild animals in the jungle fighting over a piece of meat, it is the level of desperation they have succumbed to for a very long time.

Resigning to fate at 25 or 35 is a long long prison sentence unless you are ready to take your own life in the very near future when reality strikes that you lived a cowardly life.

I am not into sharing private information unless it's outdated and therefore has little value out there.

So in the last two years I have had instances where random people come into my INBOX and ask for my telephone contacts or location. I try as much as possible to understand their motivation.

Those who have been lucky, unfortunately, NEVER call at all when I give them the phone number which I have confirmed to the police as the number I have used for a while.

I am not particularly a business person so I don't have many reasons for sharing phone numbers. I do not own a personal phone number so I have not registered any with any Telecom company. I could use a company phone registered in the name of the company though on rare occasions.

So this is possibly why you were interested in getting my phone number when there are myriads of Communications channels other than a GSM call to pass on your message.

1. A phone number is registered so this can be mapped directly to the individual with lots of bio-data.

2. A phone call can be triangulated off a Telecom mast complete with time stamps if and when your geo-location is a subject of interest by potential idlers.

3. If those abusing your privacy have an old phone number on file that they are tracking and it is not giving them vital near-real-time information, they use social engineering techniques just in case you can let down your guard to a random friend (could be an old school mate you have not met in 15 years) on social media and give out a phone number they previously did not have. This is called “fishing”.

4. There are as many broken people on social media as there are in our broken society, don't give away too much to strangers on the internet. Some are turning social media into a “honey trap” for trading information as a source of livelihood.

Of course it's not bad to own a phone. But your phone is private information you don't share with strangers.

I told them that society has given me my chances to opportunity and I have no grudges against the World. They laughed.

“Nze ndideko. Kati n'abalala bafuneko akakisa balye” I added.

Africa needs to instill the virtue of gratefulness in the core of its soul.

Someone works for government for 33 years. The public pays for a decent home for your family. Your children are sent to the best schools around the World and tax payers money used to acquire everything you desire including peasants' land.

And what does society benefit from all these investments in your family? Your children get married and produce grand children who also live off tax payers money from pampers, milk and everything untill adulthood. What is society paying all this for in return?

But you are still ungrateful to society. You violate the constitution of the country like it's your old nursery school exercise book. You behave like you literary hate the country that has given you so much than you will ever be able to give back.

The African soul lacks the virtue of a grateful heart. Some of you have had your children go to Harvard, Oxford, or whatever but what have they come back with? What value have they added on society?

Other than coming back with graduer, getting political appointments to head military installations, public institutions to perpetuate the same parasitic system. What are their public views on what their parents do to the very country that has given so much to them.

Poor souls have grown up with a silver spoon in their mouth and the same sense of entitlement like their parents. They are quiet like aristocrats and endorse everything their parents do to a hapless society they have worked so hard to impoverish.

African leaders are not volunteers. The poor society they presided over works so hard to sustain their exotic life styles and for what? Empty talk, killed dreams, empty promises and good speeches in foreign languages in front of their foreign partners.

We have failed to transform these peasant economies into industrial economies because we lack concentration & an ideological mindset geared towards solving the fundamental problems of the societies we preside over.

Before we implement a manifesto or national development plan we are distracted with the desire to stay in power by adulterating the constitution. We have failed to provide jobs to youths who are literally dying to supply their labor? 32 years we are more obsessed with predating on a society we offer so little in total disregard. We hate our societies because deep in our scarred souls is a void. The African must save himself from the pangs of early material deprivation that has built anger deep in his gut all through his life. He must also save his children who have a sense of entitlement thanks to his parents' insatiable greed to compensate for the past in order to balance society.

There must come a time when we all must actively work to heal inside so we are balanced citizens who care about the country.

GUARD: Hey, what's that you are pushing in the wheel burrow, old man?

MB: I am the new cleaner. Today is my first day at work.

GUARD: Good. So, again what's that your carrying in the wheel burrow?

MB: It is a small box sir.

GUARD: And what's in the small box for example?

MB: The box contains saw dust, Sir. At the end of the day, I collect the saw dust from the workshop for cooking at home.

GUARD: Let's check it out. Okay, good. Go home. See you tomorrow old man.

The next, the third and fourth day I and the guard went through the same security rituals and still the young man opened the small box on the wheel burrow with saw dust letting Mzee Kabulasoke home.

On the 5th day.

GUARD: My gut tells me there is something not right about you old man but I don't know what it is. I can't place finger on it. The timing, the dress code, the gesture.....body language.....

MAVERICK BLUTASK

MB: Ooooh, this early on the job? I love my job and stealing is a scary thought at this moment.

GUARD: Look, old man. Between me and you something is not right. If you tell me what you are stealing, I promise I will not tell anyone.

MB: Goes quiet for a while gazing straight into the eyes of the security guard.

GUARD: My instinct tells me you are stealing something and the saw dust inside the small box you carry everyday is just not adding up.

MB: Did you say if I tell you the truth you will not report to anyone?

GUARD: Absolutely. But you must tell me the truth.

MB: Alright. I have stolen 4 wheelbarrows, Sir. And this was going to be the 5th.

GUARD: Oh my God. You never walk back in with any wheel burrow in the morning.

Moral of the story: Most of us are so distracted by the small things to see the BIG PICTURE.

Good morning from Kabulasoke.

I am the President for 33 years. I make my brother a General. Decorate my son General. Appoint my wife Minister. My brother-in Law Minister. Bring other relatives into cabinet. Arrange political marriages for cousins, nephews and nieces with well place military officers. I control the vault to the Central Bank in order to control every living and non living thing in my domain. Boss, your intentions have been tried everywhere including Egypt, Libya, Zimbabwe, Zaire. Even General Suharto formerly of Indonesia pulled off the same string of tactics. It boils down to insecurity and the thirst for power.

Power in the hands of ones wife or son is a tempting prospect for those who have lived off domination of every public space.

If you work so hard that your tribe and family will bring you the much needed protection when the time comes, the uncertainty will continue to feed your insecurity and the end will always be the same.

No ruler outlives his society. Empires come and go. You can recruit the entire police and army from your village because you think these have more loyalty to their kinsman. Those who see through all this scam out number your ethnic military and security. You can place every crony into the public service because loyalty is more important to you than delivery of social services. When the time comes for the oppressed to summon their collective gut, your village mates will not show up. They will be out numbered, out gunned and overwhelmed. That is how it ends always.

As for Uganda an economic audit will be necessary that everyone accounts for their wealth. Failure to account for what you have should warrant nationalization of assets. That is how we end impunity.

1. Sam Kuteesa, Wife and Brother In-Law wanted by the FBI to plead their innocence in New York for using the US Financial System to commit economic crimes.

2. It also appears the marriage of convenience between Kampala and Kigali brokered by economic merchant Andrew Mwenda and New York Diplomat Adonia Ayebare has been hit with tectonic forces and developed fault lines like the Rift Valley.

3. The resignation of Former Zimbabwe Chief Robert Mugabe could not come at the worst time. Evidently the campaign to adulterate the Uganda Constitution to remove the AGE LIMIT to allow Sam Kuteesa's brother in-law to continue receiving bribes from investors begging to come "fix" the Uganda economy is evidence why the economy is in doldrums.

4. Either these people resign now or leave the Constitution alone so that they serve the stolen term of Office until 2021 and go home until the State, under a new government, summons them to court to plead their innocence for economic and political crimes against Ugandans in the last 30 years.

There is a brewing problem internal to Uganda, with regional and international dimensions.

Don't call it a syndicate. It is a WARNING SHOT

How would you sack a Brother In-Law for soliciting bribes from Chinese investors using US financial systems to finance your stolen election under the banner of “Kisanja Hakuna Mchezo”?

Smoking gun everywhere. There is a BIG problem. 33 years of economic espionage baby.

I remember “Brother In-Law” assembling BALOKOLE technocrats including Bank of Uganda officials at a Press Conference defending this very Minister among others against the OIL BRIBERY ALLEGATIONS and now the money trail.

“How can I take bribes from Mzungu? My intelligence tells me these allegations are not after the Ministers but the President and intended to destroy NRM. I got these documents myself from Andrew Mwenda. Sent Gen.Kaihura to Malta to investigate them and Were found false.” Brother In-Law went on rhetorically. Now from the FBI with a trail of emails, phone logs, travel itineraries, the actual wire transfer and confessions from suspects in custody, it turns out Brothers In-Law at least used the Mzungu financial system to take bribes from the China man. The same Bank of Uganda officials who turned up at the presser also have emails to the China man about a local bank seized that could be secretly off loaded like tomatoes.

The irony however is that Brother In-Law a beneficiary of the bribe allegations also thinks its okay to investigate oneself and find self and relatives culpable of wrong doing. What a joke!

So, with the FBI can of worms, it is now official policy in Kampala that investors have to buy their way to the President in order to invest in Uganda to build factories and create jobs. Now you know why jobs are not a priority to these people.

If all investors have had to jump all these bribery loops for 33 years including having to send gifts to the President in order to have their investment projects cleared then we have had systemic economic espionage happening right in here in the middle of Kampala reason we have a BODA BODA Economy ladies and Gentlemen instead of an industrial economy.

I remember writing about the collusion between the Egyptians and Uganda's economic criminals in undermining the energy sector back then but people did not understand.

It is easy for Egypt to pay bribes to Uganda government officials in exchange for undermining energy development projects in Uganda.

You have it there people.

So these people can sell things which don't even belong to them. All along I thought Crane Bank belonged to Sudir Ruparelia.

Now I can imagine how they sold off the National Bank of Commerce. Poor Amama Mbabazi thought he was sitting with people kumbe, these were plotting to sell off his small bank to Sudir quietly under the same dining table.

In return Sudir thought he was dealing with real people kumbe in the background they were plotting to sell off both what he had just bought and his own Bank to the China man.

I guess this is a case of PRIVATIZATION OVERDOSE in Kampala since government sold off everything. Now those used to selling government properties think private property is also public property. Now you know why brother In-Law wants a law for compulsory acquisition of private land.

I am told a certain woman MP sold a bushy goat for 10BN/- and bought UBC Land also and was frank to tell the Parliamentary probe of her financial genius.

You are very special people. But if you think you are dealing normal people, wait when they start selling off your children to Mongolia.

Maverick Blutaski November 26, 2017 •

Poor NRM violently sacked Amama Mbabazi as Prime Minister for expressing his desire to be President and Chairman of NRM. The man simply wanted to test the democratic credentials of the same party he had belonged to not knowing it had always been a briefcase organization. In barely two years they want to own the words TOLERANCE & CIVILITY in the Oxford dictionary like they are NRM's exclusive new invention. The purge of Amama Mbabazi and his supporters was violent and the Police and intelligence services were called in as the "KaleLeaks" revealed with nation wide arrests of NRM youth leaders like we came to know of the Luzindanas, Omodo Omodo and group who were locked up in detention centers for exercising their democratic rights. Remember the NRM Poor Youths? Is it FDC that harassed these NRM supporters?

FDC radicals my butt! Have FDC supporters killed any NRM supporters over elections? NRM has declared the Inspector General of Police, a one Kale Kaihura, a cadre of NRM and by extension turned the Uganda Police into an extension of the party rather than a State Institution. All recruitment, training, promotion and placement in the Uganda Police clearly demonstrates an ethnic radicalism of the State readying for more violence.

What more radicalism do you need other than the NRM Police? How many FDC supporters have killed NRM police men or supporters? NRM police men die in gruesome road accidents chasing FDC supporters exercising their constitutional rights.

The AINE group of GoForword that beat up NRM supporters was an NRM internal problem. GoForword was NRM and the violence in Ntungamo was between NRM supporters. Even the armed confrontation in FortPortal between Gen.Tumukunde and Maj.Bright Rwamirama's sons during the MP youth Elections that got a General shot by the NRM police was an NRM inside job.

After the Ntungamo intra NRM violence among its supporters, the NRM

SOLE CANDIDATE vowed revenge thus the crowning of the NRM “LEOPARD”. Where was FDC supporters you call radicals in all this mele? If the Sole Candidate could be agitated by a fight between his supporters to avow revenge, then you know what he has been doing to FDC supporters around the country.

So NRM party supporters today who call FDC intolerant went ahead violently removed Amama Mbabazi from his position as Secretary General at their ramshackled Office on Kyadondo Road.

Instead of elections, NRM supporters decided that only the party chairman should have powers to hire and fire party officials, who he can pay using public funds and hand vehicles at his choosing.

The same idle supporters of NRM who have no role in their party any more having handed all work to the Party Chairman to make all decisions are questioning the decisions of FDC party delegates who voted for their leaders as intolerant. Poor NRM supporters don’t vote for their leaders, they don’t pay membership to the party, even the cheap yellow T-Shirts are free. Why? They have no role in the brief-case organization.

If you can’t have internal party elections because of the “sole candidate” you have created in your party, you give all powers to the “sole candidate” to be the only voter on all positions of the party, you automatically render yourselves redundant and this emotional offloading of your frustration about FDC Elections is a sign of jealousy and bruised egos. Poor souls.

“SOLE CANDIDATE” & SOLE VOTER was an NRM creation in your party after sacking your Secretary General for expressing his interest in leadership. What then is the problem? You don’t want to vote your leaders in NRM but want to dictate who holds which position in FDC? You claim FDC is finished every morning, evening and in your dreams during sleep. If you are worried about DEFIANCE when we have not even picked up arms to counter your penchant for violence, what then will happen?

That is the price of promoting peasantry and corruption as a method of public management. You put peasants on buses from up-country to Nambole, pay them an allowance to endorse positions manipulated in Kampala by money launderers and then turn around and bleat on social media.

Listen and listen good good, FDC is the party of Uganda for the people of Uganda. From Maj.Kakooza Mutale's Kalangala Action Plan(2001), KIBOOKO SQUADS(2005-2011), KIFESI POLICE(2016), and the current NRM Police under Kale Kaihura, FDC supporters are ANGELS whose peaceful defiance against State inspired violence should be an inspiration to many hopeless NRM supporters. We are just thick skinned citizens motivated by a great future for country. And if you think otherwise, you need to check into a mental hospital.

Museveni has vowed to destroy the opposition, which is enshrined in the very Constitution he mid-wifed by the way. How much more in the Constitution or Uganda does he want to destroy by supplying air such as pads for schools girls or millions of labor intensive handheld hoes?

He is just exhausted the opposition increasingly continues to reject his nomadic economic policies amidst a time crisis that glares in his face. The population is increasingly resisting his every fake policy agenda unlike his blind supporters motivated by cheap money. So, FDC supporters who have refused to bow down amidst this violence are not radicals, we are just FANTASTICALLY DEFIANT against this Musevenism and we shall win this war we solemnly vow.

Starting a new Federal Democratic Alliance(FDA) like Betty Olive Namisango Kamya(BONK), Nelson Ocheger's ACTION PARTY or ANDREW MWENDA's small PR magazine in Kamwokya is one clever way finally into NRM to be placed on Mr.Museveni's financial life support machine(retirement policy).

Remember, this is public money from poor citizens who toil to pay taxes which Museveni dispenses as his personal fortune.

Of course Mr. Museveni's financial life support machine which Nelson Ochege, Betty Kamya, and many others scheme and plot to join is a fantastic motivation for most political actors devoid of ideology. And our environment breeds many of these political homosapiens.

Truth is people wear down and the struggle is not a picnic. The young people who expect Betty Kamya(60+) or Janet Museveni(65+) or Rubaramira(81) and Museveni(77) to go into the trenches to save their tattered country are not only delusional but lack ambition. The reason I am retired is because at 42, I have fought my battles, wars and have won some and I have also lost others. The best a few old folks can do to help the young is plan if they show motivation. You must be motivated and demonstrate clarity of your ambition.

The young people who however think their future lies in the old guards to build vehicles for them to "free ride" to Canan are just kidding themselves. Read my lips; like your poor grand parents and parents, you will age away and fade away in poverty for lack of ambition to challenge the status quo and negotiate for your rightful place. This poverty is structural and scientifically deliberate. It is not hereditary.

Maj. Rubaramira is a classic example. He like myself was in the Luwero jungles(1981-1986) with the old folks roaming the streets of Kampala today like they were born in Mutundwe. When you look in his eyes while his lips explain away why he quit FDC not to go join DP or UPC but NRM, the eyes are more truthful than the movement of his well endowed lips.

He is an old man in the evening of his time like myself. The same applies to Betty Kamywa and I would not be surprised if others in the struggle surrender. This is an economic war, people. It always has been. Uganda is in dire straights. Everybody is broken including those deluded with power. A desperate Mr. Museveni is going to borrow massively from the Chinese dragon in the next few years to pull off some grand elephant projects after 33 years in power but the debt burden will be on the frail backs of all the hapless citizens who looked on aimlessly. Bad debt is a painful burden.

When Gen. Henry Tumukunde then a Brigadier was locked up in the Officer's Mess in Kololo for a year over charges of promoting harmful propaganda, we all felt he was unfairly treated. Gen. David Sejusa was equally pushed off the Kameme of the bus after blowing the lid of the "Muhoozi Project". What do the two have in common? They spent their youth working for a better life. Their thing was hijacked by Museveni and were reduced to support functional roles. Their ambition had to be tamed and for 10 years Gen. Henry Tumukunde went broke. As a contingency he tried help his son into Parliament and he was contained by a UPDF bullet on his leg. What do you expect of a man in his early 60s to do when given an office desktop and chair in a small corner after 10 years in the cold? To join the opposition? Stupid! What about Col. Tom Butiime (65+) who refused the Karamoja State portfolio? He went broke within months of losing a Parliamentary seat in 2011 and a seat at Museveni's dining table. He had to beg Museveni to become man again. Old men can't fight wars meant for young people because in their time they fought their wars.

When you hear Haj. Abdul Nadduli heckling and walking with a slight limp and you pay attention, you are wasting your precious energy. He, like many are motivated by their retirement policy off Mr. Museveni's life support machine.

Now you must acknowledge Mr. Museveni's ability to dupe all these into building his patronage system that makes him master, the rest his palace workers and all the younger people alcoholics or police constables thanks to an open alcohol consumption policy across the country. So, the grand standing about people starting political vehicles all over Rubaga or Nakasero is about the inherent reality that some people are aging in a struggle which is taking long to deliver results yet they have families.

You have to have a heart of a lion to stand up to this "Musevenism" and resist the temptation to hand oneself over through all schemes of treachery we have seen

Fundamentally, this is a struggle for young people to set the agenda and struggle for. It is not a struggle of the old guards. Between 1981-1986 I was trapped in Luwero and had to drop out of school for 5 years. I saw all these old fellows you people worship eat weeds and dry cow hides like rabbits. I saw them bony and frail sometimes afraid they may never make it out of the jungles of Luwero. Their clothes were full of white lice sucking blood out of their skinny frames for lack of soap. When we got out of the bush and came to Kampala; I also watched them develop egos along the way and the old ideology of building a nation sublime as material greed struck at the core of the soul of the former bush poor men and women. The old guards will not give you space on a silver platter. They will not put a silver spoon in your mouth. They are building a dynasty through their children to continue the economic domination in which you will serve as grave diggers, night dancers and palace cooks. In fact like they have said before “the state will kill you and your children”.

Technically, you are in an economic struggle and unfortunately most of you are unconscious about it. The struggle is economic, political, scientific and its all about survival. Your troops are not prepared because you are always in bars consuming the deadly war poison “ALCOHOL”. A drunk soldier is unconscious. A soldier who lacks an ideology is an unconscious armed animal.

You can jump on every bandwagon all you like, but as long as you remain unconscious of your agency role as a citizen of your community, church, political organization you are fuel to the dominating power of the adversary.

Mzee Kabulasoke is a political ideologue.

So you are really concerned about slavery in Libya? What happened to the concept of “division of labor”? Let the Libyans handle slavery in Libya as we handle slavery in Uganda. It is called economic efficiency.

Economic efficiency demands that you are not scattered all over the map with meager resources. Concentrate effort for impact.

There is slavery right where you are. Deal with your local slave trade before you shout about Libya. Deal with the slavery in your country so your young people do not find themselves in foreign slave markets whether in Dubai, Libya or Saudi Arabia.

The moral crusades on social media about slavery in Libya are just hypocritical and hollow because they bemoan a symptom rather than addressing the root cause of the problem in their dirty backyard.

There is slavery right here in Kampala. And people don't

To my beautiful young friends. You have to make tough choices now even when you think there is still a whole lot of time ahead of you. I know you want to be the young you truly are. Unfortunately, the environment you are in demands you to mature now.

MYTH: Young people have a lot of TIME. No they don't. Only ignorant people think they have all the time in the world. Time lost is opportunity gone that may never bounce back.

To the lucky ones who still have parents willing to stake their everything for you to finish a school program; the temptation to drop out of school or the disinterest for lack of clarity of the responsibility that lies ahead is enormous. Oh, don't be tempted.

My brother and sister, there are those who yearn for the little opportunity you have even to wake up in the morning and say "Hello Dad, Goodmorning my hero". Others are worried where they will find food this evening or tomorrow after the darkness clears. Others have no hope of ever getting another opportunity to complete what they abandoned thinking they were young then. Others have no clue how to disengage from the addiction that has faltered their lives. Parents are losing children to drugs and alcoholism.

Please do the things you are supposed to do now. Every season has its own demands and calling. The more you do now the lesser the burden tomorrow. I do not remember when I was a "child". Everyday I had to make decisions meant for my parents because they were not there to get us "spoilt" a little. I guess it feels good to bask in the safety of those who care about us. But they won't be there everyday. Some day you will be alone and face your own reality. So learn early to take in the blows of life and work hard to prepare for the rainy day.

I was humbled by my life lessons growing up. And even if I wanted to, I can't be a child no more but am scared for so many out there experiencing the fears I had in the years gone-by. To those small heroes out there struggling everyday against all odds; don't give up. Your fears will be conquered. You will bloom because you were born to bloom. You have to push oneself harder than anyone else though to be in your season. Your social support system does not exist. You alone know your mission and MUST have one anyway.

It might appear insurmountable but I have seen the grace of God. Now as I grow old I see why God chose my rugged path just for me. To fight my fight, carry my small cross and run my race without excuses so I can find my freedom. You will need to define and know yourself more than anyone else today though. Horne yourself for the task. You will have to master the courage to break away from illusions, face your own fears and tell and own your own story.

The challenges of life will not reduce. It is going to get even more difficult. The more reason to define your destiny early and embark on your journey well and better prepared. If I were you, I would do it better than I did. Now I can't be young no more. I can't say Daddy I don't want to eat for then I ate because I could not be sure I would get the next meal.

This is not a message to scare you but to tell you how wonderful you are and that you are born to bloom and be your man and woman you purpose to be. Keep the focus, mold yourself into something of your own dream and purpose even when others try to distract you with their glamorous present.

Now I sit on the table of men; the Council of Elders, Kabulasoke and humbled even the more. Fellow elders are shocked by my modesty because they don't know the details of my life story. Who am I? Nze ani omwaana w'omuntu?

Protect your lives jealously. Don't die young. Postpone self aggrandizement of today for tomorrow you will have options. And always remember you are your brother's keeper. It takes discipline, character and a plan for your life.

Kabulasoke elder wishes all young people well.

“Learn the habit of SAVING & INVESTING” I explained to some of my young friends.

“But the ka-salary is too Cartoon to save anything, old man” they respond begrudgingly.

Saving like investing is not done CONVENIENTLY.

You don't wait until you have surplus to save or invest.

See, the reason Mr. Museveni goes to Dubai to meet oil Sheikhs, flies to small Belgium to smouch investors shoes, Beijing or Israel is because he runs a very poor country and lives like the Emir of Dubai in Nakasero.

Poor people have an extravagant mentality and they think living like the rich even when poor is also a human right.

Investors always have their eyes on profit(ROI).

No enterprenuer invests his money in Uganda for charity.

There must be clear prospect for profit. Short of that no one puts hard money in a market just to save the poor.

So the poor who earn a small salary must cultivate in themselves the habit of being humble by default.

Learn saving & investing when you earn little so that by the time you join the big money league you have the right attitude towards money.

By the way, even investing in “INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY” could be an easier option than this obsession in capital intensive “brick & motor” projects.

If you think your salary is too small relative to your neighbor, it is possible you are driving in the wrong financial lane. If you earn 500,000/- per month, do not drive in the same financial lane meant for those earning 5,000,000/-. Of course it is tempting, hello.

It is very possible that the individual you admire earning

5,000,000/- saves nothing at all yet you wish you would be saving if you were earning his salary. So if you, a 30 year old, waits until you earn 5,000,000/- 20 years later in order to be motivated to save and still fail to save like your neighbor you admire today, chances are you won't be able to save even on your 50th birthday.

What am I saying, the culture of saving has nothing to do with the volume of money you earn.

You must be asking. But who the hell is he to talk about money when Kirumira of Kirumira Towers, Express FC, Deputy Chairman Kwagalana group does not give us such lectures?

Hold on a bit. My grand father was a cattle keeper. His possession was his Land and cattle. When the war came to the village of his wealth in the 1980s, all his cattle was lost. By the end of war, the Land was barren. It was the time of coffee wilt disease, cassava mosaic, banana wilt name all diseases including HIV. I learnt from my grand parents that diversifying risk is critical. But saving to invest in diverse options including “intellectual property” was a central strategy.

My grand parents survived the war but not the poverty as a result of the war because their exposure to risk could only be addressed by an insurance policy since their asset portfolio was not diversified.

What was I saying again? Yes, live with in your means. It is tough seeing others “waste away” while you toil to save for investment. But if you are able to pull through one single investment that takes off and brings that freedom, you most likely will look back with humility.

When I ordered for the deletion of Fred Ruhindi out of the map of Kampala for tampering with the office of KCCA Lord Mayor Erias Lukwago, people sent him packing beswiiii.

They even chased Bernard Luyiga formerly of KCCA and his gang back to Kawempe Tula never to come back near City Square.

There was also a Deputy Lord Mayor caught on #KaleLeaks chocking on a political scheme. His name has forgotten me.

There are at least 2 MPs I have marked for deletion out of Kampala.

Mark MPs in your area who must be rendered jobless come April,2021.

AND don't be shy to tell them now that they will have no job come April,2021 and give them reasons.

NRM IN PANIC. INTERNAL CONFUSION & DENIALS OVER TOJIKWATAKO.

Explaining the sustained attacks on H.E
Rtd.Col.Dr.Kizza Besigye & the opposition.

NRM is aware of the risk of Mr.Museveni's continued stay in power due to age, mental exhaustion, an exhausted population over his monopoly, an ailing economy in intensive care unit and a general lack of inspiration from anywhere else other than the opposition supremo,Dr.Kizza Besigye.

At this moment Mr.Museveni is an asset to the opposition and a liability to NRM and Uganda from a technical stand point for his lack of motivation for policy and structural reforms with the exception of mortgaging the country to the Chinese dragon for white elephant projects.

Museveni is now the chief recruiter for the opposition by fueling public resentment towards NRM over everything that is not working as we have witnessed during the TOJIKWATAKO campaign. He is therefore the opposition's "Trojan horse" in the adversary's team. See, Mr.Museveni now has to pay MPs to change the Constitution. He has to pay for support from the population. In 1996, you would never imagine NRM needed to pay voters or MPs to pass any legislation. A section of NRM would want reforms like yesterday rightly so for political business continuity. But their clout is limited to support functional roles as political intelligence operatives since Mr. Museveni is the defacto "sole proprietor" of the NRM business political enterprise. The Museveni group which is the "stronger" force by controlling the central vault in Bank Of Uganda is aware reforms mean concessions which effectively disempowers his grip and therefore loss of power to institutions thus the lack of motivation and therefore internal pressure. It is Zimbabwe stupid.

Therefor, NRM's failed economic policies to transform Uganda from a peasant led economy to an industrial economy as he promised the 30 year old youths of 1986 who are the 61 year old poor elders of today, is a fundamental change in the mass political psychology of all Ugandans never ever to trust a leader with a blank check over their future. The 30 year old youths born in 1986 can now relate to their parent's poverty, indignity of veterans and wonder whether their lives are going to be run on the same failed economic policies. Read further.....

Mr. Museveni's political structure works for him personally and gives him little room to maneuver to fundamentally re-engineer the economy and spur industrial production. There would be no need to organize sham elections and stealing them. The young turks flanking Mr. Museveni in the wings are getting desperate but aware he is still capable of sensing intrigue and also using his many levers of coercion to send them to their political dustbin. So they are damned if they do and are damned if they don't. It is a painful waiting game inside the NRM.

And Mr. Museveni has no more rabbits to pull out from his underwear to fix Uganda's ailing economy other than mortgaging national assets for credit from the Chinese to finance his patronage of political hangers-on. Even the oil they have hedged for credit to sink into all these lined up white elephant projects will not happen on their clock as it has proved quite often since his announcement in 2006 at Kololo. All oil projects speculated on since 2006 are either stalled or simply way behind schedule. And the country's external debt has shot up to $10.5BN from $0 in 2006 when the Paris club forgave Uganda's $3.5BN debt under the HIPC initiative by the World Bank.

So, other than hoping that the security forces can continue helping them hold fort, there is no magic bullet left in Mr. Museveni to justify his continued stay in power to Ugandans and most NRM operatives are biting their small finger in confusion. "Papa" is too big to go but yet again.....

Is Mr. Museveni a prisoner of Rtd. Col. Besigye deep inside State House? This is not the opposition leader's making. Mr. Museveni fears a Besigye Presidency and will not bolt out of State House until Dr.Besigye stops running against him. That is NRM's headache to deal with. So with Museveni's continued stay in power, you have more stolen elections, a broken economy, unemployment, state persecution and growing illegitimacy to even recently indifferent people which all fuels the growing opposition to his NRM government. The school fees debate to Uganda's elite schools now clearly affects those who thought are in a relatively comfortable position economically.

There is nothing surprising anymore with Mr.Museveni refusing to leave power. His every move is predictable. It is fuel for more resentment in the population gutted by spiraling high living conditions and even with in the structure of NRM as they see every opportunity to fix the problem differently lost. The opposition numbers by this calculus can only grow rather than recede. The succession politics with in NRM is REAL yet the gate keeper locking them inside is non other than Dr.Kizza Besigye. Let them stay in there until they implode. Dr.Besigye will win any election on any given day against any chosen NRM leader in a free and fair election including Mr.Museveni and right now Mr.Museveni is the ONLY leader with a tested "infrastructure" financed by public money to help him organize and steal a sham election. This also is NRM's problem. We are not party to this kavuyo.

NRM operatives are aware that Mr.Museveni is the only leader in NRM who retains some "residual" degree of respect and "loyalty" from the intelligence, security and auxiliary forces gelled with public money rather than ideological persuasion. Any other including his chosen "successor" is a stupid risky gamble against the popular opposition leader. That also is NRM's headache to deal with.

So the risk to NRM without Mr.Museveni is that organizing sham elections expecting the same result from the same infrastructure which has no loyalty to Mr.Museveni's chosen successor could boomerang and hand the reigns of power to Rtd.Col.Kizza Besigye thus delivering them to their most dreaded political doldrums. That also is NRM's headache to deal with.

The vicious attacks on the character of H.E Rtd.Col.Dr.Kizza Besigye and opposition supporters therefore are aimed at the following.

1. Dissuade the popular opposition leader from contesting for the Presidency in 2021 as a way of young Turks persuading Mr.Museveni to breathe and go home knowing the man he fears most will not throw him in jail. Their assumption is that Mr.Museveni is actually exhausted of being in power given the natural wear and tear on his frame.This assumption is also complicated by the young Turks motivation to take power from the old man who they rightly believe now is a liability to NRM. Their mis-calculation is assuming they have shares in NRM, a sole proprietorship of Mr.Museveni. NRM is not a party but Mr.Museveni's business which he can wind up the way he has chosen to by rejecting reforms.

2. NRM operatives want to generate dissent with in the opposition ranks in general and FDC in particular that other leaders should be given a chance to run for the Presidency. Their problem is that unlike NRM where the position of Presidential candidate is "ring fenced" to the sole proprietor of the business, in FDC or DP, UPC this position is fought for through elections because they incorporated organizations. Whoever is more popular takes the day. Contestants are not chased from the party or positions of the party for challenging the only Presidential candidate.

3. NRM operatives want to create opportunity for Mr.Museveni's potential successor to build alliances with in the fragile security, intelligence, auxiliary forces and test their loyalty, restructure if necessary so they can continue organizing and stealing sham elections without the threat of Dr.Besigye. The problem is that there is no way of dry running this test without the successor actually calling the shot from the actual seat of power occupied by the old man himself. So Mr.Museveni is moving around people in the military, diplomatic corps, buying some opposition leaders, RDC etal with this in mind without moving an inch from the hot seat.The problem it still does not quantify exactly the risk profile if the successor was actually moving the pawns on the chess board to plan for contingencies. Scary!!!!

Are opposition supporters extremists, hooligans or expendables?

Gen.Kale Kaihura once coined the adjective of "goons" against opposition supporters. Many senior police officers started to use that description every time they had encounters with opposition supporters. The former UPDF CDF Gen.Katumba Wamala described opposition supporters as "expendables" just after the stolen sham elections in 2016 when the NRM Secretary General warned that security forces will Ugandans. .

- 1.The opposition and its supporters have not taken up arms to turn Uganda into a blood bath to qualify as extremists or liberators as NRA described itself in 1980s.
- 2.Opposition supporters have been abducted, illegally detained, remanded in jail, others extra judicially executed and others assassinated since the Kayunga riots in 2009, Kasubi inferno in 2010, walk to work in 2011. Despite all this provocation, the opposition leadership and its supporters have restrained themselves from violence and continued to mobilize, engage and push for reforms. They demanded electoral reforms that were out rightly rejected by NRM. Was the demand for electoral reforms extremist? Were attempts to prevent the organization of sham elections extremist? Were efforts to prevent election rigging by opposition supporters who arrested security service men with pre-ticked ballot papers all over the country extremist? Of course not.
3. Is the opposition power hungry? This should be answered by those supporting a ruler who has been in power for 31 years. Hunger for power is for those who don't know what to use power for. Uganda's economy would not be ailing with toxic unemployment, shortage of electricity supply, a peasant led economy and now the rage against school fees.

Finally NRM operatives know Mr.Museveni's successor and just don't want to confess it publicly. Ugandans know Mr.Museveni's fear and intentions moving forward. They also know there is no more damage for him to do that he has not done to Uganda since 1971 when he began his rebellions against governments.

The vicious attack on H.E President Rtd.Col.Besigye are about NRM trying to break out of their own self made jail.

DEFIANCE in the aftermath of the 2016 stolen sham election was a strategy to ensure wide ranging NON-COOPERATION between the aggrieved population and the military junta. The options for non-compliance are many and individuals are free to choose from a range of options.

It was meant to foster NON-COMPLIANCE. Now regime operatives are complaining about defiance but not police brutality against those exercising their constitutional rights.

1. The opposition demanded electoral reforms through Inter Party Organization for Dialogue(IPOD) from 2012 right after the stolen sham 2011 elections marred by violence and the walk-to-work campaign in which many opposition supporters were executed extra judicially.

2. The regime rejected calls for electoral reforms including the Constitution of the Electoral Commission appointed by one of the participants who goes into a contest to win at all COSTS. The same individual has now come out open that he supports, NOT ELECTORAL REFORMS he has rejected for a long time, but removal of the AGE LIMIT so he can continue organizing sham elections and if he loses the sham elections, he steals the results as well.

3. If NRM rejects substantive Electoral Reforms which even the ruling of the Supreme Court in the Amama Mbabazi Presidential Petition demanded in 2016, why would REMOVAL OF THE AGE LIMIT from the Constitution be a priority to require our COOPERATION? One must be a political moron to cooperate with people whom one shares nothing of common interest.

The varying tendencies with in opposition parties are normal but compliance without policy and structural reforms with in the regime is plainly no smart idea. Proponents of COMPLIANCE both with in opposition ranks and the NRM regime must detail their intentions and objectives and how they intend to achieve their strategic goal.

If the regime has rejected negotiations for electoral reforms(the basic rules of power contestation) with in the framework of IPOD funded by donors by the way, wants to subvert the constitution and remove the age limit as a matter of priority including funding MPs, uses a partisan state apparatus to dominate the population, those in the opposition promoting compliance are simply politically hopeless.

What would you do if Museveni stayed in power for another 10-15 years ?

In 10 years from today I will be 52 and you will be 10 years older. The thing is that; in the grand scheme of things don't lose the bigger picture.

We have individually and collectively contributed to the conditions that have favored Museveni to stay in power for 32 years and deliberately or inadvertently can help extend his stay for another 10-15 years under the same conditions.

Some people join this struggle because they have lost a job or failed to find one. Ideally, while this is understandable, to join the struggle requires much more than a search for personal well being. You don't fight dictatorship because you have become inconvenienced or frustrated with your personal life. You must be motivated by some form of ideological alignment that goes beyond your personal comfort.

The history of those who joined Museveni in 1981 in Luwero shows people walked out of jobs as Medical Doctors, Lawyers, Police men, and business men sacrificed their wealth for a cause they were convinced and motivated to join. These people did not wait to be fired from work. They walked away from a pay check motivated by an ideology; right or wrong.

Today people join opposition politics because they have failed to find a job, a marriage partner, failed love relationships, business has collapsed, Land has been grabbed or just frustrated by life.

The question is, what is your sacrifice to the struggle? What motivates you? In your relative comfort, what are you willing to give up for the struggle for a better country?

I see a lot of diversionary debates and it's evident they are driven by frustration due to exhaustion. The struggle will take much longer, it will be even more exhausting and draining because YOU as an individual are in this because you think it must be easy, quick and you have not done any introspection to determine your motivation or responsibility in all this. You think it is someone else mistake that you are not moving forward. You think it is Kizza Besigye who has failed to take away Museveni because it's his personal to do so for you as you watch TV. He must go to jail, he must be detained for you. It is not KB's personal responsibility. He is only doing what he has to do in his means and he has not on any single day refused you to do your part. YOU must be doing your part.

You must join the struggle because you know it is the right thing to do not because you feel frustrated with life. In fact you must ask yourself what you are willing to give up for the struggle rather than what you want to take out of the struggle.

What will you do if Museveni remains in power for another 10 or 15 years from today ? What will your life look like in 10 years under Museveni? See if you are in this because you failed to find a job, there is no chance you will find one in 10 years under the same conditions. The problem is that if you found a job even by accident , your motivation with the struggle ends there yet the struggle is much bigger than your personal convenience. At 52, I might be the one taking over government from an ailing Museveni at 88 years. What about you?

The struggle of building an industrial economy is an on-going struggle and it does not end with Museveni. Stop engaging in pettiness and focus on the bigger picture.

Mzee Kabulasoke

Twinomugisha Ndinyenka Robert That is the long term view of the struggle to better our Country. It is not entirely true that NRA/M struggle was premised on the values you mention. Actually that is what it appeared to be on the surface, but deep down only M7 knew what the core objectives of his thing, the NRM were. Those who joined him, genuinely seeking to rebuild the country, have since learnt a serious lesson as they have slowly been depleted from within the ranks of NRM and only M7 remains because he alone knows the real agenda. So while its true that people shouldn't be in the struggle for their petty objectives and frustrations, given that their motivation or commitment will shift with a change in those circumstances(frustrations), right now you have to unite all forces even the temporary ones so as to build the desired critical mass and to take the first step and then you educate or enlighten them on the real issues affecting their lives and what to stand for. Then you put in place measures to prevent a slip back into the same situation Uganda is in today, you depersonalize the organisation and make the institution to be bigger than personalities i,e bigwig syndrome or personality cultism. That is why KB is always being misunderstood... even when he never wanted to stand under the same structure of the electoral commission, he had to capitulate to the desires of the masses that stood behind him. Today I do not think they understand him properly. Ugandans need serious civic education and to know how Governments should operate and their rights. The weaker the parliament the weaker the people's power that elected them. Just saying.

Claire Lukoda Great analysis but even frustration in personal life can be reason enough for people to join a revolution and indeed realise success. It also happened during M7 bush war when people lost families at the hands of "Obote" soldiers and opted to join the rebels then.

As for your headline question, Hmmm God forbid! But I think he can't, ask TVO about his health-card!

David Dollo There was never ever any sense of accountability from Africans to their leaders. People instead, would go to admire and talk about the good cars and houses these folks owned. Unnecessary submissions to whatever they say, nobody ever stood up to question how they got rich so quickly. These thieves become semi demi gods in their villages. Everybody else can contribute to a struggle. Let the youths start to demand for accountability and take great pride in doing it. Hold leaders accountable, kick out those who aren't doing what they expect of them. This one, will only happen, when the self proclaimed gods of Africa, the likes of Museveni are gone. Africa should implement continental term limits. No more than 2 terms, to be a UN, AU, EAC ECOWAS, SADAC etc member state. The said one term, should not exceed 6 years (to avoid a one term of 10 years, making two terms of 20 years). There has got to be some kind of continental and strong regional guidelines. As for Ugandans right now, removing Museveni is a priority. Nothing more, nothing less. Muhoozi joined the UPDF, when Fred Tolit, was already either a major or a lieutenant colonel. Years later, Muhoozi becomes a Major General, while Fred Tolit et les groups are marking time on the same ranks. Fred Tolit, did a great job as an intelligent officer during the insurgency in the north. He becomes a major general almost two years after Muhoozi. The question one would ask is, did he Muhoozi join the UPDF at the academic level of the ranks of a PhD or professor? What criteria was used to arrive at his selection for various courses overseas and promotions? If you are a member of the UPDF and didn't find anything wrong with this move, then you are just a statistical sample space. Unless otherwise, Museveni will play around with Ugandans until the last day of his breath. We all know, that he will be gone one day. What if he goes away after 20 years from today, are you willing to risk and put everything on a hold and wait for 20 years of his departure? What would your life look like with him? Do you still have any hopes? How so sure are you, that you're not going to be a statistical samples of thousands Gen Kaihura boys trampled? Picture your own life. At some point, Uganda police officers or UPDF will lay one on you, and the reasons would be, that he's following orders from above. I rest my case. Take it or leave it.

1. It is good to continuously acquire information.
2. It also good to acquire and develop knowledge from what you get to know.
3. Apply the knowledge in your life to solve problems in your sphere of influence.
4. Continuously improve by remaining hungry to know. It is no longer enough to have information. Before the internet, by the internet I mean the Internet of Things” the government was the sole monopoly custodian information.

The government owned the only telecommunications company in Uganda, Uganda Post & Telecommunication(UP&TC), Uganda Commercial Bank(UCB) and others , Uganda Transport Corporation(UTC).

Radio Uganda & Uganda Television were the only monopolies for information broadcasting. Government then was very very powerful. With the loss of this soft information power, it chose to over compensate with brutal power.

Forget the Kaihura Police or its vestigial militia forces of what now remains residual power of the traditional corrupt state. Government knew everything. After news on UTV, the black and white TV set made an irritating sound with vertical lines marking the end of the program. A spy who we now call a regime operative was a harvester of Information and was feared. The people were just consumers of whatever was thrown at them like dogs running after a bone.

The world has moved on. Change has been imposed on all of us. While others are early adopters, others are laggards but Information over load is now an epidemic. Traditional monopolies collapsed under inefficiency and corruption. The spy or operative became practically an ordinary man carrying a pistol as his IDENTITY since the monopoly of information was withdrawn by market forces.

Now that you have access to this vast amount of information, how you are using this information relative to the next person will make the difference.

There is a difference between accesss, consumption and utilization.

You can have access and still don't consume the information. You can consume the information and still fail to digest it. If you can do all and utilize or apply the information to improve oneself or improve your community, that is what makes a difference. Let's talk more about this in the coming days. I have to go take my sit at the table this morning.

I hear old people will make Uganda a Super Power. Museveni could be genuinely optimistic but his optimism is not grounded in data. Fundamentally, he is draining the potential of the country by dragging it along with his inability to tame his personal ego. 35 years is a long time, enough for one leader to transform an agrarian society to at least one with the structural pillars of an industrial economy.

Is Museveni just afraid of UNEMPLOYMENT?

He lacks the organization capacity and a solid team of people with transformative ideas to transition Uganda into an industrial economy from a peasant economy it is today.

AND after 35 years, with a growing public debt sliding past $10BN it will hit $30BN by 2030 with a population of 62 million, I don't see an industrial economy.

It is good to be optimistic but optimism must be grounded in data. After 35 years in power, this man who has been reading Museveni's manifesto year in year out will not see much difference in his life.

Uganda under these conditions with Museveni and his cabal of a corrupt family and network of friends cannot transform into an industrial economy. I ONLY see a population held hostage at gun point with poverty but not an industrial economy.

Parliament and all Museveni's allies today can go ahead change the constitution and may be it will help some individuals live better lives at the expense of the hapless masses; as Ministers, RDCs or Army Positions but the structure of the State is reflective of the social inequities in the broader Uganda society. A small coterie if people preying off the hapless poor they are supposed to protect.

The army top brass may be a little better off but the bottom of the pyramid of any structure of the Boda Boda Economic System reflects a parasitic food chain with Museveni and his friends at the top of the pyramid as the sole motivation.

The idea that Museveni wants more time to help Uganda is a classic joke. He wants to help himself from his own personal fears after losing power. It has nothing to do with turning Uganda into a super power. A poor country aspiring to become a super power is another crazy joke. All his actions have nothing to do with industrializing the economy and creating jobs for an exploding population which will be 47 by 2021.

I repeat the population of Uganda is projected to be 62 million poor by 2030 approximately 12 years from today and poor Museveni wants to defeat Mugabe on the Life Presidency Prize.

I think many people have been called names; RADICALS, EXPENDABLES, HOOLIGANS, GOONS, PROSTITUTES for donkey years and they have kept their focus on the rough road ahead of them. And to some it's true. So they accept the label.

Past Leaders were also called "SWINES" while holed up in exile and unable to defend themselves.

There are people who called a whole tribe in Uganda; "POLITICAL CONDOMS" while others were described as "SAVAGES" by high profile citizens. But people kept their faith. If a whole tribe chose to be sensitive about the description of a political condom, Uganda would be in the cemetery today.

Some have even been falsely accused of being RAPISTS, REBELS and put on trial on politically motivated charges and jailed many times. You can't be this sensitive and vulnerable in this political environment.

So when you're lucky to be called a MOLE from the rich menu above, it is part of the usual PR pattern. Don't choose to become the NATIONAL DEBATE.

We have better things to deal with including the planned defilement of the Constitution, and falling for the bait by sucking energy away from the many public themes is diversionary.

Without much ado however, if someone or a group of people have a conviction of another path to where we all want to be, I would not interrupt them.

If the ABIRIGAS & ANITES' feelings and mood swings automatically become official government policy, when will they dream about transforming the BODA BODA Economy into an industrial economy?

1. ANITE brought SOLE CANDIDATE and it became official government policy complete with disbanding of the party secretariat.

2. ABIRIGA came up with REMOVAL OF AGE LIMIT and it caught fire up to State House and the country has been gripped through the year.

Seriously, the issue of turning every able-bodied young man; educated, semi-literate and illiterate into a BODA BODA rider is now an economic EPIDEMIC.

And now they even no longer have passengers as would be passengers are also now Boda riders.

"But let me say to the young people of Africa, and young people around the world - you can make Madiba's life work your own.

Over thirty years ago, while still a student, I learned of Mandela and the struggles in this land. It stirred something in me. It woke me up to my responsibilities - to others, and to myself - and set me on an improbable journey that finds me here today. And while I will always fall short of Madiba's example, he makes me want to be better.

He speaks to what is best inside us. After this great liberator is laid to rest; when we have returned to our cities and villages, and rejoined our daily routines, let us search then for his strength - for his largeness of spirit - somewhere inside ourselves. And when the night grows dark, when injustice weighs heavy on our hearts, or our best laid plans seem beyond our reach - think of Madiba, and the words that brought him comfort within the four walls of a cell:

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.

What a great soul it was. We will miss him deeply. May God bless the memory of Nelson Mandela. May God bless the people of Africa."

This year I did not smoke any grass. But after serious reflection I have gained deeper confidence in my philosophy to life. Every man and woman must have some pride in their core. Man must derive his self worth from his sweat by supplying ones labor for a genuine wage and retain ones ability to speak up against social injustice in ones community.

In 2018, I intend to remain firm in my resolve to stand against the culture of "tokenism" that represents the brand of cheap politics now entrenched in Uganda. The kind of politics that takes away a man's right to Speak up or do the right thing because along the way he sold his birth right for 30 pieces of silver.

A culture where young school going children now don't have any motivation to excel through fair completion and hard work but cheat exams because they see their parents stealing from the public.

“OBULEBESI”.

A culture where men have been de-emasculated, humiliated and turned into beggars and commodities to be bought off the shelf like tools to do dirty work.

A culture where old men have no name of their own anymore to protect. When I am 72 years 30 years from today, I want my name to be my only prized possession. 30 years from today, Mr. Museveni will officially be 104 years old, Robert Gabriel Mugabe of Harare will be 123 while Gen. Kale Kaihura, the man will be 93 years old. As for you my friend, you will be 30 years older. The assumption is that we shall all be alive and well enough to say we are proud of what we did.

If a student has spent 33 years in school, and now in panic with two years left on a program that he was supposed to complete in 10 years, there is no evidence extending his stay in school for another 20 years or tweaking the syllabus to accommodate his poor performance problems will be helpful. Now you don't have to believe me on this, but evidence is important to support conclusions of possible outcomes. Right?

Those who were at Makerere University in the late 1990s can recall a one MAWA who had overstayed his tenure at University.

You don't change the education curriculum of the country because one student has stayed in school for 35 years and still failed to complete a program he was supposed to complete in 10 years.

Like a National Constitution, if someone had a brilliant national program which should be implemented within 10 years and even after 35 years the 10 year program is neither here nor there, you don't change the Constitution to accommodate failure or promote under performance. You instead let the failed or under performing program just pass and let others capable of pushing through their program within schedule do their thing.

The student failed to complete his program from 1986-1989, we extended his stay in school to complete the program until 1996. He again said he needs more time until 2005 to complete some papers that fell through the cracks along the way. He bribed teachers to change the rules that he can sit any exam until he passes as long as he is below age 75. The aging student now looking older than the teachers says the curriculum should be changed to allow 75 years+ old students to stay in school permanently until they die.

If old students are allowed to stay in school permanently where will little children go to school if under performing elderly students turn school into their homes?

Read my lips: Your student is a medical case turning the entire school into his private hospital.

If you are in a situation of relative comfort today, be mindful of those who are less privileged than you are. I am talking to these MPs who think life starts and ends in PALAMENTI.

Many former MPs are very poor today like those they sold off in 2005 to remove Presidential Term Limits. I am told they were paid $2000 at the time.

If you have a job in a sea of toxic unemployment, don't go on the mountain top and proclaim the economy is doing well because your principle has paid you 300M/- to further entrench poverty.

You will return to this very drenched community you are selling to the principal using tax payers money.

In a bad economy, those employed are just a week away from unemployment.

BE HUMBLE.

I asked one friend yesterday, what he would do if he lost his job and he was like “DON’T SAY IT”.

The job is unpredictable like the weather. Always prepare when the job will be no more to guide your conscience towards those who have none today.

The arrogance that comes out of CHEAP MONEY is just delusional. Ultimately, you end up humbled by the reality of life.

Work to expand the economy for everybody. It is there you will find your freedom.

Let’s say on average a Uganda MP has a debt stock of 300M/-($80,000) digging deep into his monthly income of 20M/-($6,500).

Let’s also assume the average MP’s gross income in 5 years is 1.2BN/-($340,000) which could translate to a net of 900M/-($240,000) after income taxes if they pay taxes at all.

So, if this MP has good prospects of re-election in 2021 his stream of income could even improve in addition to the 900M/- by 2026. Good motivation for a popular MP. What would then motivate this MP to take a bribe of 300M/- approximately $80,000 to risk losing approximately $600,000 in streams of income and the public reputation overtime? I am aware of the time value of money. But the math of $80,000 being better than $600,000 over the years with the attendant reputation damage is unimaginable financial illiteracy. Am not even talking about the risk of the political ripple effects that could play just out of this perennial violation of the constitution.

Is the Principal blackmailing NRM MPs because he knows something the MPs know but would not wish admit publicly? Did the principle help rig the election for most of these MPs as part of a larger scheme and has shown them evidence and woken them up into reality and it's pay back time? Do MPs know of a reality they are not returning to Parliament?

The public must send a message to MPs that their pay master is using public money to bribe them so they can lose much much more over a long period of their lives including their public reputation without much dent into their debt problems so to speak. In fact it is political blackmail.

Prof. Gilbert Bukenya in 2003 as Vice President during his Upland Rice pet project led the campaign for the removal of the Presidential Term Limits while in Fort portal. Now Gilbert might say he does not regret his actions. He might even seem fairly well off but I doubt it is out of the pay for the removal of the Presidential terms limits. And he was not alone. Unlike the former VP the others are literary insignificant unknowns. No one knows under which tall elephant grass they are hiding.

So, MPs can reject the bribe out-right or take the bribe and still REJECT the removal of the AGE LIMIT and send the paymaster back to his small village before we go pick him up for all the Political and Economic crimes he has been involved in against the people of Uganda.

The public must vigorously send a clear message to MPs that the pay out to remove the AGE LIMIT may not even help them clear their mountainous debt burden but still send them back on streets never to recover again.

The bribe may actually not keep the loan sharks away but will definitely push MPs who have gone against public opinion and removed the AGE LIMIT from the Constitution back on the dirty streets.

OIL companies financing the Old man's Life Presidency Project out of blackmail. The OIL is now used as his personal cash cow even before it flows from the ground so he is cutting deals between the Chinese, British and the French squabbling for projects to pay MPs and his political operatives to stay around.

Now you know why the British, Americans, French or Chinese dragon don't give a shoe about your human rights violations by the military machine they have financed through all kinds of crooked projects. You are on your own.

The bribery allegation against SAM KUTEESA with the China man is not an isolated incident. The OIL firms are squabbling over the oil and their home governments through their Embassies in Kampala are paying attention. It is NRM's fundamental pillar of political mis-management 3.1.1.

Now you know why the European Union, US Embassy, UK Embassy, Chinese Embassy, Dutch Embassy, Belgian Embassy, Irish Name all Mzungu Embassy in Kampala is quiet as human rights violations, extra judicial executions of opposition supporters, theft of public funds , do not really both anyone these people. Do you remember the 50BN/- PRDP funds eaten in the Prime Ministers Office? That paltry $14M incensed the entire donor community more that the extra judicial execution of Ugandans by the NRM Kifeesi police financed by Germans, Ireland, Britain and the North Korens all combined. All donors in Kampala suspended AID over $14M but of course the Principal has a big kitty from oil companies.

The reason a Parliament of 450 peasants cannot discuss a bribery allegation in the international media against a Country's Chief Diplomat is a sign of a dead society. 450 clueless people.

Wake up. Country is on sale to the highest bidder. And the Principal is the auctioneer.

You and your children are on sale. You won't own an apartment in Beijing, Moscow, Washington or London. You won't own an apartment in Johannesburg. All you have is Uganda and Kawempe Ku Tano or Kate Falawo(whatever). If it is sold or mortgaged to the China man, you are a slave not a master.

Now you can choose to go to the bar and drink your sorrow away and wait to die. But those who have something won't do the dirty work for those who have nothing. Those who have nothing must do something to get something.

I take you to the truth. I can't force you to drink from the well.

America's UCC; the Federal Communications

Commission has voted overwhelmingly to dismantle “Net Neutrality” since UCC of Mr. Godfrey Mutabazi and his cousin Kale Kaihura is constantly shutting down the internet in Uganda.

In line with Uganda government policy to slow down or completely shut down social media,

KYEBAYAGALIZA EMBAZI—

FCC will inadvertently save some people from going to jail for annoying the old man. Even Red Pepper might not further indulge in “Cyber Bullying” with slow internet.

Moving forward; the poor on the internet will be “driving” on slow internet lanes(if they were not already) while the rich go on the super-fast highway exchanges.

The poor must stop thinking the rich really give a damn about their plight.

And Ugandans might say, why the heck. Does the American internet really matter if our small Uganda internet is up and running? The internet is about content and location of the content. Where is Uganda’s internet content versus other relevant content anyway?

Now you must be wondering how this concerns you in Kyanamukaka or I in Kabulasoke, Ggomba.

Telecommunications is like a food chain. The guys at the top called Internet Bandwidth Providers(IBP) like AT&T, Verison, British Telecom, French Telecom, Google own Satelites and over capacity terrestrial systems driving the internet from which small entities like MTN or Airtel get a small share of the big pie to retail to their customers in Kabulasoke.

So MTN is like a retailer of Internet Bandwidth and like the poor buy paraffin to light their homes making the oil Sheikh rich, money flows from Uganda all the way to the top of the food chain. If MTN Market share is largely for the very poor, MTN will tap on to the slow internet lane for its poor customers while those hooked to British Telecom will have their traffic prioritized over MTN. Of course those who have been watching pornography will be impacted if they can't afford fast lanes.

When the Office of The Prime Minister(OPM) diddled $14M approximately 50Bn/- of PRDP funds in Northern Uganda, the donor community and their umbrella organization;

- 1.Ireland
- 2.Britain
- 3.Belgium
- 4.Denmark
- 5.Netherlands

6. United States

7. France

8. Germany

9. European Union Commission

Blew up their fuses in smoke. They all went kukus announcing AID suspensions or threats of suspensions including dispatching auditors from Dublin, London coming down here in Kampala to count beans in the grass over the $14M scandal that became of the OPM. Their prison warden set up a mock trial and sent one fellow, GODFREY KAZINDA to a small dirty corner of the prison. And the donors went back into their offices; business as usual.

That same cocktail of international donors in Kampala were up in arms when the occupant of Nakasero Hill went head and signed off the ANTI-HOMOSEXUAL BILL into law amidst a barrage of insults in front of international media.

Why are they silent now when their “ally” they have nurtured defiles our supreme law again and again with their muted endorsement? If they can make noise over the ANTI-GAY LAW, why keep quiet when other human rights violations are happening every single day? This same cocktail of donors have for 33 years financed the NRM militant police and the UPDF into the current torture machine against Ugandans it has finally become. When this machine massacred the Bakonzo recently in Kasese, they were all business as usual because this incident was less important than their beautiful $14M envelop.

20 years of a grueling military campaign in the North was another war in Africa. The people displaced in the camps for decades were just another scar of Africa. The tattered communities and children whose lives lost were just part of the African ugly statistics. The Americans and British had to stop Khartoum from “Arabizing” the South using Uganda as a conduit for Weapons systems into Sudan fueling the current conflict. 40 years on and S.Sudan remains humanitarian catastrophe and Uganda another broken record waiting to happen. No hope for Peace in S.Sudan until refugees are scattered around the bushes. No hope for democracy until more African prison wardens are long gone and the oil rich S.Sudan is bleeding on with a broken economy.

They have given diplomatic cover to the old man to invade neighbouring countries including Rwanda, Congo and S.Sudan and each of these has resulted in blood letting of genocidal proportions. To them he is a good prison warden for their containment policy.

Then came in the Chinese dragon lurking in the wings for its imperial hungry parade . The Russians whose only export are weapon systems. The North Koreans training our young people on how to torture and execute their own people. The North Koreans, Chinese or Russians just like the other donor cocktail have been here and seen Ugandans dominated helplessly by their “ally” and evidently in their grand scheme of things Ugandans are just prisoners, Uganda is the prison and their ally is the prison warden thank you very much.

The TOJIKWATAKO campaign among Ugandans has been peaceful and civil and the donor community, the Russians, Chinese and North Koreans just look at Ugandans with cynicism for demanding their dignity respected, as mere prisoners demanding to get out of their jail and be free which is no motivation. They want us so angry that we take up arms and burn our country down with more military hardware imports and another cycle of economic degradation. And as long as Ugandans continue feeling trapped, there is just one way out of this. Ugandans have tried every civil attempt. Participated in sham elections, sham constitutional making process with amounts to nothing, peaceful assembly to demonstrate and in all these extra judicial executions, assassinations, economic sabotage has become the order of the day. The loyalty of the donor community(West) and the Eastern block(Russians, Chinese, North Koreans) is not to Ugandans. They have been doing good business with the prison warden.

Ugandans needs to re-focus on identifying these contradictions in the diplomatic Corp and define them for what they are and develop an anti-dote that promotes their own agenda.

The Belgians, the Americans, British and French created the Congolese dilemma with a dictator in Mobutu in Kinshasa. The Americans and British supported the dictatorship in Egypt and Yemen for more 30 than years. The Americans and Russians fought a 35 year proxy war in Angola. The French and Belgians built a fire place in Rwanda whole the British and Americans lit it up. Africa is just a battle ground and her people just collateral damage.

What do Africans want in all this?

Paul Kagame was like if Museveni in 2005 changed the Constitution to stay in power and the sky did not kiss the earth and darkness did not set at noon in Kampala, why not Paulo in Kigali?

And in Kigali the Constitution was changed. Paulo had vowed in many public appearances never to overstay his welcome in Rwanda stating that institutions have been built and far outlive individuals and personalities. Of course, he like many others is an African man who changes his mind and therefore the Constitution must change with his mood swings.

And Burundi's Kaunda suit man Pierre Nkurunziza was like me too ain't going nowhere leaving Bujumbura, my lovely people.

Then the grand master of defiling the Constitution in Kampala was like, but Paul Kagame also swore never to change the Constitution but changed his mind. He even gave himself 7 year Presidential terms this boy. This young man who was here in Kampala eating Molokonyi now has 7 years Presidential Terms? Who the hell does he think he is to stay longer than I the son of Kaguta who made him who he is?

He goes on, "I know I have said many times on TV I would NOT rule beyond age 75 but hey, Ugandans still love me except the Constitution. What is the Constitution anyway when Ugandans say aye? And since power belongs to people; I will change the Constitution and remove the AGE LIMIT, thank you".

Besides there Elections here unlike in Kinshasa where the son of Desire Kabila has simply decided to stay without any pretense of an endorsement from the people even with a mock election like I normally organize here as dress rehearsals.

AND in Bujumbura, Pierre Nkurunziza is like but if Kabila, Kagame and Kaguta can just what they want with the Constitution, why not Nkurunziza in Bujumbura?

In the end, egos run the show in Africa. Egos run our homes, schools, NGOs, Churches, mosques, relationships. And we might think the problem is actually Kaguta, Kabila, Kiir, Kagame, Nkurunziza but ultimately this is a problem deep in our social construct and mass psychology as a people.

This drives our collective lack of ability to negotiate, enforce and honor contracts or agreements. These people represent our very inner fabric and a lack of motivation to institutionalize checks and balances that restrain our innate individual greed.

The quality of leaders of any society is reflective of the quality of the people of that society. What is your quality? What is the quality of the people of your community? In a low quality society, you need a Political Messiah to emerge with a vision to re-engineer that society because the society has no capacity to identity, put that leader in place and hold him accountable.

Most people are susceptible or pre-disposed to compromise because they feel trapped with no option out of their situation or have nothing to lose by engaging in dubious public behavior.

The events in the Uganda Parliament in the last couple of months are a reflection of the general malaise in the population. The more the population feels economically and militarily trapped and dominated by a small cabal, the more likely individuals will be pre-disposed to compromise as a sense of helplessness or shamelessness engulfs their being rather than negotiate for their stake and cooperation in return.

These conditions create opportunity for a few patriotic and proud men and and women. Trapped and dominated, rather than lie low they innovate and manouver to change the terrain. They are motivated by their sheer patriotism and pride to weave through the rocks, the gullies, the rain, sunshine, the hunger and the blow after blow of the fear that their dreams may never come to fruition.

It is this minority group of courageous men and women that emerges when everyone else feels subdued and dominated. These men and women take up the honor of saving country where many can't summon the courage to stand up.

Uganda is at precipice of another turbulent course. Those forcing Ugandans to take matters in their own hands over estimate their capacity to contain a population so motivated to fight back. And there are other regional and international dimensions that can come into play and would make the country unbearable for everybody including those who hold the population at gun point. Let's not lead the country into temptation.

I would like to wish the Management and Staff of the small Independent news magazine and their associates in the so called intelligence circles a successful 2018.

Thank you and your hardworking staff for the 5 pages of research your small magazine accorded to the son of a peasant from Kabulasoke in February, 2017. I was asked questions by very important people over this publication which was advertised on social media for weeks.

Who is this man? What did you do to him? Do you know him? Does he know you? Why does he seem angry with you? Do you owe him any money?

My answers were all brief like a mini skirt. I don't borrow money from poor people. I have never ever in my life met that man. I was not contacted or interviewed by any of their journalists or investigators before publishing the story. I was therefore investigated, prosecuted, convicted by the same gang of "investigators" who had no courtesy to contact me to get my side of the story. Same gang claimed they knew my physical address and a catalogue of EMAIL addresses if indeed they could not afford coming to Kabulasoke but never bothered to contact me. In their wisdom their findings were final, I was guilty of their delusions and had no right to defend myself from their artistic fantasy. These journalists/investigators or intelligence cocktails!!!

So, I don't know him personally but have heard his voice inside a small Radio set in my grandmother's bed room. I have never attended the village schools he went to. I have never done business with him. I infact have never sat in the same room with him in my entire life and possibly never in the future. NEVER.

I never share a table with people of questionable character. I never shake hands with people of questionable character. I never compromise with people who lack any modicum of morality. Of course, I am a proud fellow. Integrity does not come cheap. You work hard for it and keeping it is even harder in a sea of material poverty.

In Kabulasoke we shall be sitting under a tree as elders to have EKIGANIRO.

African proverb. "An orphan who refuses to eat cold food, eventually follows his parents"

Thank you for making me "famous" in 2017.

To the tax man and the political elite, Xmas is smiles all the way to bank. The tax man hands over your tax shillings to the Central Bank to replenish the reserve used by the Principal to pay off MPs to rape your constitution, pay off the SFC or Police Officer who will crack skulls or Spines of opposition MPs and their supporters. Cut the supply lines of the enemy by withdrawing your economic cooperation first.

And this should not be just about Xmas. It should be a deliberate way of life. An on-going effort to reduce the ability of the ENEMY from using your own behavior as a source of fuel for his war machine of domination.

Your taxes are used for funding the patronage system used to dominate and humiliate you because of your lack of political consciousness. You do not comply with those who don't negotiate for your cooperation. You defy and oppose them uncompromisingly. That is a civic duty.

I can have a quiet Xmas in my home. Oh yes you can too.

I can read the Bible in my home. I can have a normal meal. Ultimately, this mood must resonate around your whole surrounding as a conscious political animal.

Everyone is asking where is Xmas literary meaning where is CHEAP MONEY? The question is what are you celebrating that requires wanton consumption? You have no Constitution that defines your nation but want to feast? Eeeeh!!!

Can't you stop for once and reflect on how your political behavior contributes to your entrapment?

Start acting deliberately and boldly. If the MP is driving through the village, stop him/her and demonstrate your anger decisively. They should not get a second chance to see your anger. If they do they must be very afraid.

These things are interlinked. These MPs are your enemies. They are not patriotic. They committed treason and ideally you should be able to stop and deliver justice to each one of them by acting locally in your community but decisively. Every community should have vigilantes determined to defend the Constitution from these animals.

Now they are going to predictably preach UNITY because it's Christmas and they know you are religiously confused about their intentions. The religious leaders benefit from this dogma. Some traditional leaders endorse this political confusion because it works for them. It does not work for you.

The more alcohol you consume the more taxes you surrender to the tax man so the people who raped the constitution can replenish their war reserves to pay the police man who is going to break the spine of your MP or the crack the skulls of your supporters.

Uganda's problem is ultimately a lack political consciousness to connect the dots of how the population fuels its own strangulation.

After what happened in Parliament every Ugandan with a sound mind should give alcohol a break and consciously define the enemy and devise punitive means to counter the enemy. I am using the word ENEMY deliberately here. Your enemy has no interest in your well being and you have no reason not to devise means to neutralize the enemy.

Those MPs should fear you. They should fear coming back to your village by you working with others to make it impossible for them to return. If they force their way back. Stop them permanently. Every village must constitute a patriotic cell to ensure the enemy is kept aware that there will be no more room for violating you without dire consequences.

However, when these MPs come back to the village and find you drunk and give your more alcohol using your tax shillings, you are effectively a repurposed agent of the enemy.

There is no UNITY in Uganda. Don't allow anyone to preach UNITY to you while they are depriving you of your rights and possessions. We are a divided country and every able bodied Ugandan should summon courage and correctly define the enemy in his small sphere of influence. Build active cells in your local community and actively counter the enemy.

AND to do this you have to be a sober and conscious agent.

They shouted POWER BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE when fidgeting with the Constitution to entrench a Life Presidency. By default, they handed credence to those who feel uncomfortable with this life presidency scheme. If the AGREEMENT that binds us together into this cocktail called the Uganda Republic doesn't work anymore, can't be respected by all of us then Uganda exits in fantasy.

If districts in Uganda are too big to deliver services to the people, so is Uganda. I would therefore encourage anyone who feels DISCRIMINATED to opt out of a union that does not work.

If districts have been fragmented or Balkanized into small chiefdoms to fill up an already bloated Parliament in the name of service delivery only to be effectively used as a tool for entrenching poverty and dictatorship, then those who feel this union is not working are constitutionally right to opt out.

1. The Nile Republic
2. The Bachwezi or Ankole Republic

3. Bukedi Republic

4. Buganda Kingdom

AND if S.Sudan got foreign assistance from Uganda to attain independence from Khartoum so should others in Uganda who want to opt out. AND since the constitution can be adulterated whenever people like Magyezi or Abiriga get a mood swing, these regions should simply agitate for a referendum and if they vote to opt out of Uganda they should be left to go since power belongs to them according to the mantra of these uncultured people.

It seems the mafia is finally closing in on my brother Gen.Kale Keihura for harboring Presidential ambitions with hovering suspicion he has tacit support from the top echelon of a neighboring State.

See, NRM cadre praises from the principal could have made Keihura get into overdrive. In the course of duty as IGP, he had to make many political enemies who have been brought back on some form of rehabilitation (aka neutralization) program and the rivalry makes him susceptible and therefore a potential victim of counter intelligence misinformation of a narrative that he has been a “double agent”. A double agent is a troubled man from both sides when one party becomes overtly paranoid.

One side would want to prove he has been a double agent and will build a case by even planting evidence(faking theft of cooked up ISO files) just to fit the narrative based on the objective. If true though, the other side based on the risk of exposure factors would wish to erase any evidence that implicates them(actual stolen ISO files) which could include eliminating the subject based on a Cost-Benefit assessment.

Now I remember Amama Mbabazi asking after his ouster in 2015 “Is it virtuous to lack ambition?”

In Uganda Presidential ambition is “treasonous”. Worse after a man has paid billions of tax shillings bribing MPs to rip the Constitution apart. Then he discovers you have been a double agent with a small but militarily powerful neighbor.

The moment Gen.Kale Kaihura stated he had established a network of 11M “crime preventers” he effectively declared his Presidential ambitions and became a marked man. 11M voters is effectively the vote rigging syndicate. Like Amama Mbabazi accused H.E Rtd.Col.Kizza Besigye for jumping the Presidential queue and Gen.Kale Kaihura in turn accused Amama of the same in 2016, the General has effectively committed “treason” for jumping Museveni-Muhoozi’s exclusive queue by hobnobbing with our cousins in Kigali. But can’t a brother run to a brother to sponsor his ambitions? What happened being ones brothers keeper?

This is not good. The Rwanda matrix will rock this boat in this cocktail and people will lose badly.

As for Gen.Kale Keihura, the mafia is going to hang you to dry on a tomatoe tree.

BREAKING: MUSEVENISM EXPOSED:

Power does NOT change people, it reveals ones inner self. Who knew Mr.Museveni would be begging/threatening Ugandans to listen to his speeches? Ugandans are not interested in any more speech laced with deceptions.

The man who came to Kampala as a political Messiah in 1986 now has to either use public money through PR propagandist or threats against media houses to have his message broadcast to a bored population. There is a problem. He needs courts that issue court orders only to be selectively rejected by the Police and if respected then he needs a Minister to come in and order the police to stand-down with a threat of a counter force.

In 1986 until 1996, everyone would buy blue Tiger or the red EverReady batteries for Sound Solo or Panasonic radios to tune in. The man had hood winked everyone as a Messiah who had single handedly gotten Uganda's Silver bullet. Now Ugandans know him as a power hungry African man like all the others. When people see you revealed they won't want to listen to empty promises no more.

When DP's Dr.Paul Kawanga Ssemogerere tried to sanitize the Presidential Election 1996 under the 1995 Constitution, John Nagenda and Mr.Museveni used the New Vision to run a smear campaign of skulls dug out from mass graves of the Luwero bushes.

Who knew Mr.Museveni would have his own fresh mass graves in Kasese 32 years later after 22 years covering up mass graves in Northern Uganda and accusing Kony and LRA? He had built a career in accusing the UPC government and Obote for State inspired violence, extra judicial executions of citizens and human rights violations. Then he built a PR machine accusing Kony and LRA for all the murder in Northern Uganda. But Kasese showed us that Mr.Museveni had more capacity and motive to destroy the North and it's people.

Now Mr.Museveni needs to pay unemployed overgrown youths as political propagandits on social media to advertise his speech. He needs the intervention of State institutions to threaten media houses with suspension if they don't broadcast what the public knows is his only speech they have heard for 33 years.He needs cadre judges in the judiciary to subvert justice. He pads and fabricates his poverty eradication credentials without blinking an eye.

Predictably, anyone now desperate for some form of employment to gain access to elusive political groceries is turning H.E Rtd.Col.Dr.Kizza Besigye into his pet subject for exposing Mr.Museveni. Instead of providing industrial jobs to young people, they are paying idle young men and women as hecklers on Facebook and Twitter. KB's only crime is exposing the political fraud in Kampala for all Ugandans to know the character

Mr. Museveni has been masking for many years. All the attacks directed at KB are because he exposed the false Messiah for Ugandans and the international community to see. It is not a good image to sanitize by demotivated PR propagandists.

PR propagandists accuse Opposition supporters of refusing to abandon the opposition supremo for being consistent and honest about the political situation in country. By supporting H.E Rtd. Col. Kizza Besigye, Opposition supporters are setting the standard of political character.

1. They want leaders elected democratically through free and fair competition and who subject themselves to the law.
2. They want leaders who commit not to betray the cause for personal gain. The Beatrice Anywar, Betty Kamya and Maj. Rubaramira group.
3. They want consistency and integrity.

What then is wrong therefore with KB's supporters not willing to tune in and listen to a speech they already know word for word has no bearing on their economic circumstances?

If Mr. Museveni is very popular he would not be begging the population to listen in. He did not do so in 1986. He should not now. Let his speech be directed at those who his rulership benefits.

It is evident Ugandans who have little children want to teach them to be better versions of their parents and would not want to associate with the political fraud we have witnessed in Uganda in the last 33 years.

Opposition supporters against Mr. Museveni are not after gaining free access to public money but a better country in which they can thrive and live normal productive lives. They don't want to predate on the state as the army of PR propagandists promoting fraud because they have relatives in the army or Parliament whose livelihood is dependent on this political fraud. Opposition supporters care about the future of the country and have legitimate economic and political grievances against Mr. Museveni. The reason they don't want to tune in and listen to his political lies.

Simply, let NRM ask its supporters to tune in.

Long range planning is inconveniencing to most people because it suppresses the very incentive and high appetite for immediate self gratification.

It on the contrary demands that you set goals that will mature in the medium to long term. Oh and the pain of waiting for fruition!

The impatience, the fear for the unknown, the temptation to be like your neighbor who rewards self today either because his goals set 10 years ago are yielding or just not planning to be around for a long time in the forceable future churns in our gut.

Your life today is what it is because of your choices made 10 or 20 years ago. Your life in 20 years from today will be the outcome of the cumulative choices you have to make over those years starting yesterday.

Your country will be what it is in 20 years because of the cumulative choices, indecisions and decisions taken over the years.

Life is not a gamble. You will have to do your fair share of heavy lifting to move to the next stage.

Remember, most people want someone else to do their heavy lifting. And the outcomes are what you see everyday around you.

If you have lost time, be more efficient with what's left of it.

We need more taxes to awaken our national consciousness. People who don't pay taxes for instance should never have a right to participate even in the SHAM ELECTIONS we are used to in Bongoland.

If I had my way I would re-introduce the POLL TAX. Why should people who can't pay taxes get involved in electing those who steal tax payers money for instance?

Of course we need to introduce a Land tax across the country. Whether you are a peasant or a landlord you should pay a tax for owning a factor of production. Those who own property should pay property taxes. Taxes awaken the soul of a sleeping population to go figure out how to meet their daily personal needs and public tax obligations.

If you can't pay tax for owning a factor of production then you have no business owning it. Offload it on the market if you can't use it to produce wealth.

If the tax man is hovering over your income as an obligation then you feel a duty to demand what the taxes are used for.

Re-introduce graduated tax to stop young people from idling away playing pool and drinking alcohol and loafing about unemployment.

Of course I encourage govt to continue its culture of promoting public corruption as well since those in charge of our taxes have no incentive to be accountable. Why should govt be accountable if the population is disinterested in holding leaders accountable?

Bring on the damn tax code on Social Media, Oxygen, Water. Just bring the damn code. A child tax is actually long overdue to contain the rapidly growing population. Every parent should pay a tax for every child they produce. Right? I thought we are following the Chinese political formula now?

In Kabulasoke we are ready for all taxes you download on us. We are awake.

Am immune to flattery but this is a skill you have to deliberately acquire.

To many, it is tempting to desire some form of acknowledgement from others to feel good about self. People want to be told they are good, special, intelligent or smart without any proof. If you don't believe you are good, why should someone else convince you otherwise?

Many want to be re-assured they are beautiful, handsome or rich because of their inner self doubt or denial of reality. Others want to be told they are powerful or popular because ultimately they are weak or their popularity constantly exaggerated or fabricated.

But the suppliers of flattery are equally motivated by self interest most times short term of course because they know those who need some flattery are internally conflicted and desperate.

If you see me not responding to your flattery, please understand. I am an old man not interested in distractions.

But can't we let go of the UN Service Center to Nairobi in the spirit of the East African integration? Besides many Chief Executive Officers(CEOs) of "Big Brands" in Kampala are Kenyans. If Kenyans have come to Kampala to help run our "Corporations" so should the UN go to Nairobi and plug the gap there.

We will even have more space for accommodating our own air crafts when Uganda Airlines comes back to life. Let Kenya also have this thing for the good of our neighbor.

If we can kick Uganda Airlines back to life, that space will come in handy. These quarrels over the symbolism that the UN is here with us ignores the immense opportunity in the Departure of the UN and it's personnel. It is like the British lowering the Union Jack in 1962 handing us our self governance and we beg them not to vacate our facility!!

The UN certainly has good reasons for wanting to relocate to Nairobi or Timbuktu. They can even go to Bujumbura if they want. Uganda's reasons are also all over the place. Mpozi, why exactly does Uganda want to keep those UN fellows in Entebbe again?

Personally, with this era of the infrastructure development bonanza we should be bidding farewell to the UN as we look into the future of expanding capacity at Entebbe Airport as the oil start dripping.

Writing winding letters to the UN Secretary General Boutros Boutros Gari(shssss is the old man still in charge?) begging to keep the Airbase is not revolutionary and patriotic. In fact it makes us seem like we are begging for favors from these UN. It makes it seems like the UN knows something about our Somali project credentials than we actually want to believe is true since it's our tramp card. Yes, our JOKER in the poker game.

Our work should be exemplary and sufficient to ensure common sense prevails in New York unless corruption and witch craft of the Kikuyus has defeated our own and taken our seat at the table.

Tomorrow I will be in MAGODESI & MUKUJJU Consulting the elders whether this quarrel with the UN for 280 jobs is worth our gallantry in S.Sudan, Somalia, Chad, Zaire, Rwanda, and even in Kasese.

By the way, jobs are not created by charity but deliberate economic policies that spur production. So the UN might be saying, well we have created for you 20,000 jobs in Somalia so we can withdraw the paltry 280 with minimal impact on the real number of jobs.

Do you Feel like trapped in a bubble? Operating only in the “inside” because it is all that feels safe in this web of “economic cannibalism”?

The reason you shake hands or share a table with those motivated exclusively in taking from you or containing you is not because you believe in social graces. Have you ever wondered whether you are actually one of them in substance but just on the waiting bench?

The mass tolerance for vagabond behavior all around us is weaved in our very own social cultural DNA. We have cultivated an environment of utter lawlessness, total disregard for common decency, courtesy towards fellow men because that is what “Econimic Cannibalism” breeds.

We murder our own. Now abductions are becoming some form of industry; a way of life. Whoever wants money from ones neighbor you abduct their people for a ransom.

Doctors, Teachers, Police men, Soldiers, taxi drivers, carpenters, Judges, Lawyers, Boda Bodas, Religious & Cultural Leaders, Grave Diggers, Politicians, Witch Doctors are all low on morale hoping for a miracle they can convince the next hapless fellow they don't look the vandals they truly are.

Gradually, we have all become immune to vandalism as an acceptable culture. The new normal. News of Land grabbing by those supposed to be custodians of our common wealth is met with grins on TV. A big eyed woman MP who had stolen UBC Land went on TV asserting she sold goats to buy UBC Land. She never made a police statement. She was never summoned by Police for uttering false documents. She had learned from another old man whose long fingers were caught in the Global Funds cookie jar. During cross examination by Justice Ogola the bush soldier went like "Where were you when we were in the bush learning how to grab the neighbor's goat?".

When Parliament demanded that Ministers in the OIL BRIBERY allegations resign; One suspects went bonkers "If I resign the country will become unstable". Hmmm!!!

Standards of public accountability are so low that resignations by those holding public offices in trust are alien even when caught in situations of compromise. We all swear NEVER to resign. We look for excuses. We accuse the victims for plotting our down fall.

We simply vow never to let go of our hard earned right to be the ultimate vandal in our new animal kingdom.

Even Religious and Cultural Leaders go beg the chief vandal for money and walk away with a share of the loot with the excuse they want to redistribute it back to the hapless victims at the bottom of the food chain.

Now most people think this is the model that works if they are able to get their chance in their life time and have no idea an alternative that works for all exists.

The reason it remains elusive is because we are now all accustomed to waiting for our turn in the next bend which never comes. The alternative that works for us all won't fall from the skies. It needs hard work. It will require painful sacrifices. It will bring bruises because it is a product of a shared vision of hard painful work.

As you choose to wait for your turn in a web of the current economic cannibalism just like your aging parents did; the chance that you will be eaten by the “animal” right above you in the food chain is as good as a done deal.

Ask your ailing landless parents in their 60s or 70s what they would have done different 30 years ago.

I can bet you my cheap shoe, in this “animal kingdom” you my friend won’t win. You have already lost and just aging away gracefully counting every passing day until your candle burns out. You chose to do nothing because you thought someone else was supposed to do your heavy lifting.

You may not agree with me on many things, but I don’t share a table with vagabonds.

450MPs, the Judiciary and the educated public have ACCEPTED that its NORMAL to detain a GENERAL and GEN.KAIHURA in particular without TRIAL.

By extension, a blank check has been granted that under certain circumstances ONLY known to M7 and his friends, any Ugandan can be picked up and detained without TRIAL for as long as M7 wants.

Infact now it's NORMAL to abduct, kidnap, forcefully break into corporate data centers, selectively enforce or ignore court orders, grab land or embezzle public funds.

If M7 and his cabal one morning wake up on the wrong side of the bed or in their usual bad mood swings; NATIONALIZE ALL PRIVATE LAND or abducts the KABAKA, any MP, the SPEAKER, CHIEF JUSTICE or any member of the PUBLIC & detains them without trial, please keep your POKO POKO in your village bars.

On 14th September, 2013 at Dulles Airport in

JUSTUS AMANYA had published material that

I tried to access the material so I can sift through and understand the motive and the substance of the allegation but I was unable to as the author had blocked me to ensure I cannot defend myself.

In between a lot has happened. In the next couple of weeks, it is going to be 5 years since this allegation came out and despite abductions, detention, possible attempted assassinations, jail and court battles, in Kampala and others as far away as Dublin, TVO is neither here nor there.

Some of TVO's former fortune hunters are either on the run, already in exile in London, others are now holed up in dungeons in Makindye and their sponsor leaking his wounds for being conned of millions of dollars in what has turned out to be a wild goose chase.

Other actors and speculators who wanted to make a financial killing are now deflated by the promise that never was and many egos bruised.

Is it logical now to conclude that POLITICS is arguably the most “LUCRATIVE” economic industry in Uganda attracting job seekers for lack of opportunity in other sectors of the economy such as tourism, manufacturing, agriculture etc?

Something major seems not right.

I am told young graduates searching for elusive jobs in an already bloated public and civil service in government are now being advised by relatives in government to join the police or the army.

But how many people can the police, public service, civil service or army accommodate?

Mr. Museveni has Balkanized every district to create jobs in Parliament or in Local Government. But even if every parish in Uganda became a Parliamentary Constituency as a means of job creation by Museveni's economic policies, it would create just 100,000 spaces for individual in disguised employment out of a work force of more than 10 million and more coming on the grid every year.

Why? The Parliament of Uganda, poorly funded Local government or the entire government in the current state do not produce value for money with the exception of perpetuating a predatory patronage system.

This is the very reason taxes, inflation, poor balance of trade, exchange rates, interest rates or cost of credit, cost of living are going up yet wages of the few workers effectively in employment and disguised employment never go up.

Despite the high appetite to collect taxes, there is no evidence for reforms, no quality education and health for citizen amidst increasing systemic public sector corruption, criminality and insecurity of persons.

When the economy is not in good health you don't raise taxes. You instead review your business processes to optimize economic efficiency.

You reform the delivery structure of government. You reduce the size of government, you fire more than 50% of a redundant Cabinet, you reduce Parliament from 450 to 100 effective legislators, you reduce the size of the army and retain a small but well equipped military, you send RDCs home, the 100s of Presidential Advisors back to their villages. You empower the police and judiciary to enforce law and order.

You reduce useless Foreign Presidential Travels which produce nothing for the country.

Mr. Museveni literary sleeps in the air these days visiting Tanzania today, Juba tomorrow, Nairobi, Pretoria, London, Khartoum or Equatorial Guinea but the Return on this Regional & International travel is just dismal even by mere casual observation. It is like Museveni just loves to sleep in the Presidential GulfStream more than in State House these days.

Why not effectively utilize embassies abroad instead of these useless international travels of government officials?

You then invest saved resources from all these frugal measures in capacity development of public social infrastructure so government officials with ailments are treated locally, their children and other use these upgraded public institutions. By default you ban foreign medical tourism.

In May,2013, Gen.Sejusa warned Uganda about the “MUHOOZI PROJECT” in the pipeline with a plot to assassinate or cripple potential elements in various segments of the country. Targets according to the memo were suspected to be opposed to the Muhoozi project. And somehow assassinations in Uganda have since become the new NORMAL.

Gen.Aronda Nyakairima who was alleged to be one of the potential targets was removed from the CDF docket the same month May 2013 and appointed Internal Affairs Minister.

The poor fellow died on an Emirates flight after a stint supervising Gen.Kaihura and we have even forgotten he threatened military action if Parliament was re-called over the death of MP.NEBANDA.

The “MUHOOZI PROJECT” was crafted as an insurance policy by Mr.Museveni & can only succeed if the threat or risk of a mutiny by old Generals is either neutralized physically, mentally or economically crippling them using the example of hot headed ones like Gen.Sejusa. But it also requires that the political ambition of some young active political actors operating within and outside the State is contained while others their cooperation bought. Thus, the General's internal memo to the DGISO was never investigated but threats of court martial and closure of media houses.

This is where the re-deployment of Gen.Katumba Wamala(another aging General possibly with no political ambition) from CDF to Minister of State for works shows the creeping hand. The other is the deployment of old disgruntled Officers into Operation Wealth Creation(OWC) a makeshift project to keep Bush war Generals occupied siphoning government funds for personal use.

Central though is the deployment of Gen.Muhoozi as CDF. Gen.ELWELU the man at the Center of the Kasese massacre consciously conflicted with guilt, as Commander Land Forces. You need someone with a crime of genocidal proportions to serve your political project with hope of protection among other younger fast tracked officers.

Gen.Kaihura as IGP was given power & resources to cripple the traditional opposition by force as well as undermine the old Bush war political operatives like Amama Mbabazi. Of course Amama was politically crippled.

Gen.Kaihura suddenly felt non-expendable like “King Maker” after the sham 2016 elections like everyone else who has been used in this craft developing political ambitions of his own real or perceived.

But the author of the “MUHOOZI PROJECT” needed a senior political cadre and military General to cripple his fellow bush war Generals out of the way. By the time Kale Kaihura was done with his aging peers; he was reporting to his junior Gen.Muhoozi apparently who reports directly to the REAL MUHOOZI, the project beneficiary.

Guess what, Kale Kaihura now in detention for two months without trial has to smooch the back of Mr.Muhoozi's hand to pass over a message to Mr.Museveni seeking for forgiveness for crimes he does not even know he committed.

So, the crackdown on Gen.Kale Kaihura and his network of Lieutenants is not because they committed crimes. Kale Kaihura was equally a political target by the “MUHOOZI PROJECT” who like all the old generation Generals had to be politically crippled & contained.

Kampala's Lord Mayor Erias Lukwago, FDC Supremo HE.DR.Kizza Besigye and the growing militancy or disgruntlement in the population and other economic factors could not allow a smooth and quick “monarchical transition” thus the purging of the “AGE LIMIT” out of the Constitution to allow the old man buy more time.

This is why the plan to weaken, disband & destroy the opposition by 2021 was drawn and massive resources for media propaganda in print, electronic and digital media right after the sham 2016 elections targeting Dr.Kizza Besigye & other opposition actors.

Having broken the back of old Bush war Generals, the emergency of BOBI WINE & the new wave threatens to decelerate the “MUHOOZI PROJECT”. Yet the old man can’t rig the natural wear and tear on his frail frame with the passing of time. He is physically and mentally exhausted. The young country is exhausted by his monopoly without much economic dividends and wants him out like yesterday; a nightmare he can’t fathom without spilling any blood.

Central to the project are the stakes for the “OIL ECONOMY” which has already been mortgaged to the Chinese through massive debt to protect the political and economic interests of the family.

Faced with growing frailty, a growing population of disillusioned unemployed youths across the country, increasing militancy as evidenced by targeted assassinations of regime political operatives by what appears to be an unknown enemy, the risks the “MUHOOZI PROJECT” presents are KNOWN

UNKNOWNNS thus the current illusion of the “LIFE PRESIDENCY PROJECT” as a back up plan.

This is how the assassination of two young people close to BOWI WINE & ASUMAN BASALIRWA in BUGIRI & ARUA come into perspective. The assassinations in Bugiri & Arua are acts of depseration to break the momentum of a new crop of politicians with a youthful appeal under the slogan of “PEOPLE POWER”.

It is the “MUHOOZI PROJECT” stupid.

Mr.Muhoozi would lose a Presidential contest to H.E KIZZA BESIGYE, LORD MAYOR ERIAS LUKWAGO or Gheto President BOBI WINE by knock out and he(Muhoozi) would need a miracle to have trusted operatives across the country who can steal an election without plunging the country into full scale war like in 1980. Mr.Museveni knows the stakes are high & scary with a clock ticking endlessly.

But what exactly is “ELITE” about the SPECIAL FORCES COMMAND(SFC), the new FACE of VIOLENCE & BRUTALITY against Ugandans? The use of iron bars, blunt objects to torture citizens or extra judicial executions of domestic political opponents or adversaries is not how elite units of any army should operate.

I read Uganda blogs & even the mainstream media use the word “ELITE” to refer to the Special Forces Command in an effort to distinguish it from the Uganda People’s Defense Forces and am like what exactly is elite about violence and brutality against those a national army is supposed to protect?

Until recently, the UPDF had some remote claim to a civilized organ of the state but the SFC has damaged this reputation especially among young people who did not know that past armies, whose rank and file largely comprised of less educated, poorly resourced & equipped soldiers behaved with impunity similar to the current crop of the so called “ELITE” Special Forces Command.

In other words ELITE or NOT there has been no substantial transformation in the ideology and doctrine of the military as an institution of national defense in the post-colonial ERROR.

The actions of the SFC since the KASUBI RIOTS in 2010, Walk to Work protests in 2011, recent KASESE massacre of the Bakonzo, attack on MPs in Parliament during the AGE LIMIT debate and now the creeping assassinations in the country and torture of citizens demonstrates that the army remains a tribal outfit under the Command & Control of friends and family to economically and politically contain any political dissent & subjugate citizens into “BEASTS OF BURDEN” rather than defend the National Constitution & FLAG.

I thought the Army’s constitutional role was National Defense against foreign aggression.

What does the word “SPECIAL” in Special Forces Command stand for given the face of violence & systemic brutality against Ugandans that the “Special Unit” of the Uganda armed forces has increasingly become?

Below read the origin of Special Forces Command & the author of the doctrine of violence in SFC.

A procession of candidate Kassiano Wadri's supporters in one direction, through Arua town after a massive campaign rally meets the Presidential convoy heading in the opposite direction.

It is alleged a stone is thrown at the Presidential convoy “smashing” one of the SUVs.

The Presidential convoy continues to its destination where a military chopper is waiting to fly the President to Kampala.

20 or so minutes later, after the President has left, the Special Forces Command(SFC) drives towards the Hotel where the then candidate Hon.Kassiano Wadri campaign team including JOURNALISTS, other MPs & MP.Hon.Robert Kyagulanyi are holding fort.

Ideally the objective of the SFC at this point would be to inform the police of a potential incident, help identify the alleged “Stone thrower” and hand him to the police as a suspect for processing.

It's at the hotel, inside MP.Kyagulanyi's parked car, on arrival of the SFC returning from the Primary School where the President has boarded his chopper to Kampala, the late YASIN KAWUMA is executed in cold blood. This is at the hotel where Bobi Wine is residing together with other MPs not at the point of the alleged “incident”.

1. The extra judicial execution of YASIN KAWUMA appears therefore pre-meditated by those SFC operatives who drove to the hotel in search of a “Stone thrower”.

2. The assassination was not executed at the point where the Presidential convoy was “stoned” from to give some credence to a remote possibility of a stray bullet which has been made reference to albeit vaguely.
3. The SFC went on rampage 20-30 minutes after the “fact” of the stone throwing “incident” that is alleged to have shattered the Presidential convoy SUV which give credence to what appears to be a poorly planned response to the alleged “incident”.
4. The Police was in a better position to investigate the “incident” to determine authenticity of the incident, motive & identity of the Stone thrower if at all a Stone was actually thrown.
5. The forceful search of the hotel for MPs & the candidate by SFC & the alleged guns found with Bobi Wine does not explain the cold blooded execution of YASIN KAWUMA, his driver seated in a car parked at the hotel.
6. If the PR had been planned right, the alleged guns(I don’t know how many) “found” in Bobi Wine’s hotel room should instead have been placed inside the MP's car in which YASIN KAWUMA was seated to remotely justify the cold blooded execution of the young man as an act of self-defense also linking the guns to the MP since the slain young man was his driver.

Summary of my judgement:

1. SFC appears to have had pre-meditated motive to kill or cripple the owner of the car in which YASIN KAWUMA was executed.

(a) Explains the level of brutality and torture of all suspects who remain alive.

(b) If Bobi Wine was in his car at the time of YASIN KAWUMA execution chances are he would also be dead and the guns would have been placed in the car as well not the hotel room.

2. SFC planted guns in the wrong place and the PR machine crushed leaving loose ends.

3. The arrest, illegal detention of JOURNALISTS & the dismantling of their recordings was a cover up to distort the facts of a botched plan in order to re-create a narrative that sanitizes actions of rogue elements in the State.

Now that even the technology “laggards” are finally accepting “THE CLOUD” as the present and future MOTHER of business technology platforms, let’s focus on how to re-align our national skills gap priorities with the global market demands and urgently.

A while back I wrote something here about;

1. Security of technology and business.
2. The next skills gap in technology to support businesses globally.
3. The gradual convergence of global regulatory regimes on data privacy, crypto-technology export/import restrictions in local and regional markets.
4. Low versus high wage labor markets to incentivize technology skills transfer and retention.

There are many cloud solution industry drivers and the following below are a good start for any young Computer or IT wizkid who wants to develop and retain a foothold in regional and international markets for an appropriate wage.

1. AMAZON WEB SERVICES(AWS)
2. MICROSOFT AZURE
3. SAP

Now if you are good in Kampala, MTN or BARCLAYS Bank will get you and lock you down at $10/hour for 8hours a day shift and therefore $80 a day and therefore $1,600 a month which is a good deal. But someone in Riyadh,Nairobi, Addis Ababa, Accra, Tunis, Dubai, Qatar, Johannesburg or Abuja with the same skill set is making $20/hr, $160/day and $3200 a month.

In other developed and high wage labor markets like Europe, Singapore, Hong Kong, Canada, Australia,etc a Cloud Architect is making approximately $80+/hr or between $150,000-200,000 a year and these folks are moving from all over India, China, Nigeria, Kenya, Pakistan to take up these technical and business roles because of unmet demand for these skills.

Step one, get to understand the global technology market and skills demand and work to acquire the necessary IT engineering skills through training, personal development and honing your business communication & project management skills.

Step two, understand your skills market worth across the entire spectrum of the global technology market.

Step three, weigh all the factors why you must earn $9/hour and not $70/hr in order to decide where you must apply your acquired professional skills either as a volunteer or take up your rightful seat at the table.

It is hard work. It is foresight. It is long range planning to break through all the loops. But again, what good is in something easy to get?

To most of you, walking into a job interview has about as much appeal as walking into the dentist's small room knowing your teeth will get tools rip through them. This is because job interviews mean answering questions you didn't anticipate. It's also because these interviews are inherently subjective, as opinions and first impressions are formed based on our natural biases, limited information and preconceived notions.

Now some people must be saying why is this retired old man always talking about JOBS. Why can't he talk about entrepreneurship? Tell me anyone who does not need a job and I will give you my old underwear.

1. People kill and die for jobs. Why do you think Mr.Museveni does not want to leave power? You can spin it whichever way you want but to Mr.Museveni or Prof.Balunywa or Baryamureba, they love their jobs because jobs pay their bills too as they would for you.

2. It is easier to find a JOB than starting a business otherwise everyone would be an entrepreneur and no employees anyway.

3. Everyone deserves to find a job to live a dignified life being able to pay one taxes and meeting one's other needs. This is why people are politically angry. This is why a poorly paid police man or SFC Officer will torture and kill on behalf of his benefactors in government. This is why nepotism and cronyism is much a vice due to scarcity of jobs forcing family members to look out for each other.

So back to the interview discussion. The job interview process is subjective, you can't anticipate the questions, and you might feel awkward when you are talking about yourself. This is where story telling works to overcome the obstacles.

Human brains are wired to get attracted and interested in stories. Stories build a connection between you and the interviewer, as brains align during the story-telling process.Stories also have the effect of filling in the blanks especially if all the interviewer has seen is your resume but your real story that offer the context to your past roles, responsibilities and milestones in your CV.

After thoroughly understanding your job description in the solicitation.

1. Write out your stories ahead of time with examples relevant to the job description. Writing notes helps encode these in memory to help you provide context including the details when pressed further for more clarity.
2. Be prepared with awkward stories that explain some of your past mistakes and how you overcame them to get the job done even if it was on your father's village farm as long as it helps provide context to your ability to solve problems.
3. Be audience specific. Tell them what they want to hear depending on the role. The HR Manager might be interested in your communication skills while the Project Manager wants your problem solving skills. Be prepared to tell different versions of the same story.
4. Polish up your story with a good FINISH. Like football, a good striker is a good finisher. Your story must be wrapped up with a conclusion to drive the point home. That is the GOAL.
5. Rehearse your stories. Even great speakers practice their speeches. Luck is when preparation meets opportunity. Rehearse, rehearse, rehearse. The more you rehearse your stories the more comfortable you will be in telling your stories.

Always remember, a good war plan is as good as its first encounter with the fire power of the adversary.

So how does one become a President of the East African confederation? All the 5 or 6 countries are just there. Uganda Shilling, Kenyan Shilling, Rwandese Franc, Burundian Dollar, S.Sudanese Yen, Tanzanian Pound. What is even there to politically federate about other than Ugandans trying to appeal to the good mood swings of other fellow poor neighbors to accept our “Big man” as their ruler as condition for averting violent change of rulership?

Uganda on her own can donate Mr.Museveni to East Africa as a way of soothing his ego to let go in favor of his remaining life motivation of becoming the President of a bigger community of “nations” as suggested by Hon.Winnie Byanyima.

Why would other East Africans want our President? Put differently, what has Uganda benefited from our President of 33 years that should awe Kenyans, Tanzanians, Rwandans to willingly give Ugandans their cherished wishes? Burundians or S.Sudanese might accept the offer if it would help them get rid of their own from their small towns.

Would all the other ego men in Bujumbura, Kigali, Juba, Nairobi, Dodoma therefore submit to the “King of Chiefs” as a political transaction in exchange for a peaceful transition in Uganda from their ruler of 33 years but in return for what?

BTW, I am not opposed to the East African Federation or the Organization of African Unity(OAU), whatever their meaning in form and substance. State formation is a trial and error experiment I know.

I am however 100% certain, the ego of every African strong man in their respective small towns stand in the way of collective progress to care about the strangulation of the Ugandan people by their ruler who knows no other address but State House Entebbe. .

Kabulasoke is my home. To many, the name of my cradle invokes images of rural poverty a common denominator associated with most rural Uganda. While urban poverty has its unique characteristics, rural poverty in Uganda scares many when I swear by village name.

From Osukuru, Kwapa, Mukuju, Paya, Nagongera in Tororo, Kabunyata or Katagwe in Luwero, Kabulasoke

Ggomba has the same social structure, demography and the common scars of poverty of a rapidly growing population.

The increasing land conflicts are symptoms of the environmental pressure imposed by an exploding population coupled with rudimentary means of agricultural production.

Unfortunately, even a 45 minutes drive from Kampala to Busunju or a few miles off the main road at Namayumba in Wakiso along Hoima road will demonstrate that proximity to Kampala does not necessarily translate into economic progress to almost 80% of the Uganda rural population.

For me Kabulasoke is symbolism of the power of history upon which we all can work to transform ourselves and those who will take our place. Kabulasoke is not my prison in which many imagine I wallow in poverty.

If I owned a plane I would call Kabulasoke my RUN-WAY on which my plane lands and takes-off without which would render owning a plane very cost prohibitive. Kabulasoke reminds me of my formative years as a little boy when my dream oscillated between wanting to become a TRAFFIC OFFICER, SOLDIER or PILOT as a career purely out of imagination.

In my village I looked up the sky at the sound of a plane to marvel and feel my sense inferiority relative to those encapsulated in a metallic bird flying high over my village skies. My childhood gave me a deep sense of self drive for something.

In 1980 I rode on a bus with my father and his fellow village “big men” who I feared so much only to watch them humbled by a powerful traffic police man or soldier at road blocks. I was like this one man can stop a whole bus full of “Big men”. I also want to be Traffic Officer.

Kabulasoke is not my prison. It is my reference point for a life’s journey half covered. It is my Osukuru or IYOLWA when I was in Tororo. It is my Wobulenzi when I was in primary school. It is my village. But I am not a prisoner in my village. From hear when I purpose to travel to other villages, I go to harvest and come back home.

To the young man and woman, your village is the cradle of your life story. This is where your story starts as you go beyond it’s boundaries and write more pages of it. Get immersed in your story early by defining how far you want to go on your life’s journey beyond your village to be that traffic police man, engineer, doctor or pilot and bring meaning to your life.

The initial human instinct is always to fear moving away from the culture, social support systems and the norms of your community. Change is a scary prospect. But how else to learn how other villages do things and expand your knowledge? And don’t delay too long to start for old men can’t FIGHT.

MY VILLAGE KABULASOKE.

An autocrat occupies every vacuum created by those under his oppression. The more space you cede in fear of the dictator the more cruel LAND EVICTIONS, LAND GRABBING, EXTRA JUDICIAL EXECUTIONS since now PUBLIC CORRUPTION, NEPOTISM & CRONYISM have been “morally” NORMALIZED with a pseudo-legal regime that enforces them.

See, it is no longer news that billions of public funds have stolen or the cost of a Chinese funded project have been deliberately inflated. Is it? It is no longer news that one youth or two in Mityana have been shot dead by a police stray bullet or a village has been razed down by a government operative. This is the new normal because the population has been numbed to accept these as the fate of a country under hostage.

Every inch of space ceded to the forces of the dictator is occupied by the dictator and those who benefit from his rule. AND, deep down in your soul you know it is going to get worse but afraid to confront your own demon of fear to call things what they are and use every opportunity to push back.

The dictator is going to use all tools of deception and coercion to give you a false sense of hope until you are too old to fight back just like aging parents today, evicted from what remains of your land some day, or permanently unemployable as you accept your fate that your life was after all a lie from the start.

Is not the dictator now blaming your old parents for not planning for you? 35 years ago your parents (the youths of those days) were told the same mantra you are being fed on today. Today they are old and exhausted after waiting on for 33 years and under cruel evictions. They are too weak to fight back and their children too timid to regain what their parents have lost.

If conditions are what they are when we are just 40 million poor, what is being done differently to ensure that 20 years from today when you are 45 years, life will be different? The moment your future cannot be negotiated today but just imposed on you by a corrupt cabal, your chicken is cooked and ready.

I have warned you against your indifference, inaction and perpetual anticipation for some Messiah to come save you but ultimately this is your generational fight.

Old men don't fight for their FUTURE for they are living their future now.

Use whatever resource you have, wherever you are and whenever you can to challenge the rules of the game already rigged against you.

This is not FICTION, this is your reality!!

Be careful. The world is filled with many psychos who want to control everybody and unfortunately a majority of us are wired to be SUBMISSIVE like sheep.

My brother and sister, a healthy dose of skepticism and defiance is good for you.

Learn to say NO, STOP or PAUSE if someone is rushing you no matter who they are. If you feel someone is pacing you up, say NO or PAUSE & interrogate intent or motivation. It could be anyone; your wife, husband, girl friend, police man, politician, pastor. Anyone can get your NO or STOP because you want to ensure whatever is going on works for you and your potential psycho.

If you were born to be controlled by others you would have come with a REMOTE CONTROL from your mother's womb.

I have lost many friends of mine over the years for being YES MEN. What happened to you people wanting to carry other people's bags or open other people's car doors?

Good luck with your unquestioning submission. You are good fodder for bullies and users.

Now BAKALEKE & BAROZA balira kunsiko nga bumyu. What happened to men of them days?

Fear for uncertainty or the unknown inhibits our individual and collective ability to take risks in life. Fear and anxiety keeps us away from attempting a real fresh start locking us into our false safe cocoon. It makes rulers fear their own people, crippling their dreams and quest to aspire, succeed and in the extreme cases take lives of some innocent people in the process.

Fear decelerates our momentum to navigate to our goals by sticking to traditional notions and ways we have been taught how even when they are long outdated. It numbs our ability to embrace change including respecting our rapidly graying hair & visibly not so young skin anymore. Fears makes us believe we are not good enough because those in our circle have recycled this joke on us for far too long and we falsely accept we have reached the best we can ever be.

It inhibits our long held dream to start a business or walk away from a job to go find something else to do that brings us more meaning. Fear makes us stay on a job we don't like to do because we have accepted what we feel as our fate.

There are people who have not taken leave in 10 years for fear someone will take their job while on leave.

There are doctors, Engineers, Lawyers, Teachers who would do better as accountants, financial advisors or business men downtown but fear to walk away from their current stations to change careers or open up a shop in Kikubo.

Bana ndaba batya nze banange Omwaana wabandi!!!

Then there is this natural human instinct to hide in the “safety of numbers” as social animals. If a majority members in our social circles are grappling with the same economic hardships or indecision, it calms our individual anxieties since we are not alone. When we feel a sense of vertical mobility we want to share it within our social circles for some form of validation.

Listen, in this race you are competing against yourself. It does not matter in which level of the food chain you are. Your goals are yours alone and the success or failure of your goals is ultimately yours to account for to self. Oh yes, the excuses. Stop it..

Ladies & Gentlemen, if something is not working; don't fear to try out something else because your break through could be that idea you have procrastinated upon for a decade.

And Bobi Wine's KYARENGA is a living example. Namboole Stadium management after the Busabala demo wishes they had allowed the show to happen. Bobi Wine and his team could have given up under frustration from a morally bankrupt political patronage system but opted for Busabala.

AND the junta now has to pick tax payers money to subsidize the rotting stadium. Next time they will calm their fears and let the masses pay their way into Nambole.

It is still possible, amidst all that seems insurmountable, for you to walk your way up from the bottom of the earth and take your rightful seat at the table with “Kings”.

The word “RIGHTFUL” is the operative word. It means integrity, taking pride in hard work and serving others without compromising your principles. In this part of the world it still pays to be principled.

But you have to put in the time and do your heavy lifting, develop character, earn the respect because you bring something to the table.

Today, I had a long conversation with an old friend over lunch and I asked him a question that made him lose his appetite and actually gutted the mood completely.

“What would you do if you were fired from your job today?”

“TOKYOGERAKO” he retorted and his mood switched off until we parted ways.

The question I asked was in context of the entire social conversation on the economy and was intended to bring the conversation home on how individually vulnerable we are.

It's like I had cut his jugular. His eyes beamed into me like I was the “devil incarnate” who wants to bring a bad spell on his family. He became withdrawn after that.

It reminded me of how “ritualistic” or sensitive we are as a society when things get closer home. There are people who think buying “LIFE INSURANCE” policy or writing a will is an automatic death sentence rather than a tool to protect family or transfer of wealth.

Anyway, as a “SON OF PEASANT CLASS 1” as my old friend Edson Kalyebara would say, I think contingently because “In times of war I must prepare for peace, and in times of peace I must prepare for war”.

At a certain threshold there are “ideas” or “agenda” whose motivation or intent you must unmask and deliberately “firewall” your mind against.

The authors, propagators, associates of these subtle nasscist “ideas” MUST be dealt with like a “Leprosy” epidemic at all costs.

The “agenda” to hold you hostage by vending fantasy as hope, distribution of tax payers money, with no impact, as a gimmick for compassion & masking parasitic instincts as sacrifice.

Firewall your minds from contamination....because the end goal is a population trapped in beggar mentality expecting the designers of the “containment policy” as the “savior” or messiah.

Can you imagine even Sudir Ruparelia now has to pay or beg middle men to find his way to the pinnacle of the very “mafia” he helped perpetuate?

Now don't get me started. I did not identify the “MAFIA”, it was former V.P Gilbert Bukenya and confirmed by former IGP Lt.Gen. Kale Kaihura all wailing for public sympathy when they were faced with imminent existential threat from their former mafia colleagues.

A man graciously walks out of the ghetto, earns international fame with strong name recognition nationally; not by gambling, spilling blood of others or winning a lottery but working very diligently & political sour grapes and arm chair “analysts”, most of them recent arrivists from Kamonkoli, Kiruhura, Kyenjojo, Busanza-Gisoro, Paya, Magodesi, Mukujju, Kabunyatta, Ziobwe to Kampala start throwing all garbage at him.

Yes, some of you came to Kampala just recently and it's one of your greatest achievements but you diss hard climbers like you brought the first bricks that built the foundation of “little” Kampala.

The “why him and NOT me” mentality must be objective to drive you to compete with others positively rather than gutting your system with abnormal energy against those history has chosen to be great despite the odds against them.

Like I have said before, it is possible for anyone to walk out of the slum, ghetto, some remote place and go straight on top of the mountain. The ghetto, slum, village is not a permanent “prison” or “station” for malcontents but people whose time or opportunity has just not yet come.

Stop feeling bad for people who put in their time to go far up the top. Those who thought the mountain is exclusively for them alone, please accept the new comers as potential customers or service providers as some of you soon will start descending down to the ghetto or back to your village because it is a dynamic economic equilibrium of many variables. Staying on top of the mountain is hard work just like climbing up to the top from the ghetto. So kudos to the kid who walks out of the ghetto or that remote village and shows up for the hard job.

I am for all young men and women willing and ready to give life their best shot.

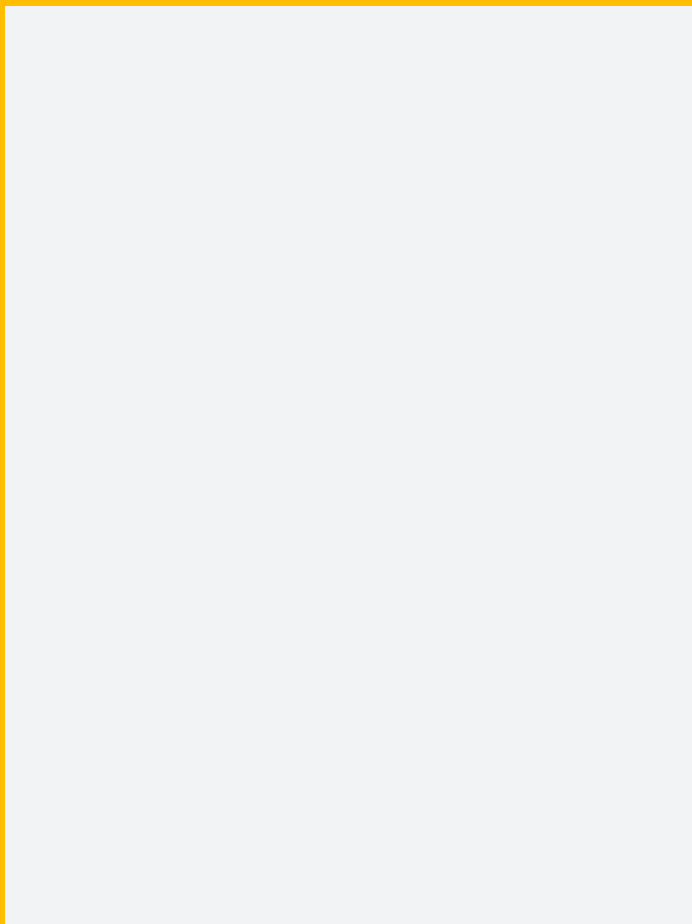

Stop “NUGUSI” now and learn to wish others well especially when you know how hard and genuinely they have found their way to the top.

Like my grandmother would say “Some of you have small & fragile hearts”.

Stop HOLDING DOWN people. Celebrate those among you who overcome what a majority think is insurmountable as a source of inspiration for others still down the bottom.

I have been working with relatively young people (below 40) and in my interactions with them, I have found 10 skills that prevent many of them from becoming a beacon of professionalism. Skills not formally taught in school yet so vital. Skills that would transform a young professional into a ‘hot cake’ for inclusion in successful enterprises:

1. Attention to detail: In secondary school, one of our mentors, an elderly man in the ‘Brothers of Christian Instruction’ congregation used to say two slogans to us every time he met us: “Neglect Nothing”; “Mind the Minutest”. Young people seem to lack detail. They gloss over things. They are not cerebral. Reports are shallow and lack the meat – the sort of detail that creates winning submissions. In organizing an event, they take simple but pivotal things for granted, in the end causing unwarranted failures that are so basic. The grammar and formatting are pathetic. Descriptions are ‘elephantine’ (like 6 blind-folded people touching and describing an elephant). Most of us are not very bright but we use preparation, detail, research, and organization to appear so. You cannot expect someone to keep checking on small things to see if ‘anyone’ thought of them – including ‘closing your freaking window to prevent rain from ruining the office when you are away at night'. Attention to detail also involves openness to seeing the learning cues laid by your mentor.

2. Systems thinking: When my fellow 'Mitchellite' tripped and fell flat while coming from the mess, his plate of food remained exactly horizontal and only one bean managed to fall off. Real world, things do not occur in straight causal lines – things are connected; causal chains are complex and balanced. One thing affects another which affects another and until young people appreciate to think about multiple components that make up an initiative, they cannot be trusted to steward things. You are charged with a given task but interrelated with that task are several other aspects that influence the deliverable – have you thought or those multiple components so that most of them are considered; or at least you are conscious about them? Many young people are too lazy and too 'laissez-faire' in their thinking to understand that things happen in a broader dynamic context. Without a systems perspective, one cannot write a winning funding proposal for instance. Without a system perspective, consequences are not appreciated.

3. Reliability/Consistency: The GE9X family of turbines that fly a Boeing 777 run for 16 hours at core temperatures of 1300 centigrade (higher than the melting point of each of the elements that make the core) and extremely high pressures that generate 100,000 pounds of thrust every instant, but they never relent or fail. From Rio-de-Janeiro to Amsterdam. The following day the same jet goes to Melbourne and the same turbines do the same exact thing. One of the biggest problems with today's young people is unreliability. Reliability is synonymous with 'repeatability' or 'consistency'. You got to be predictable. Your word ought to be your word. Once given a task, someone should be confident that with you will get the job done – then they will give you all the independence you need. The youth claim they have no jobs. But give them one simple job as a 'manager' of some sorts and they will mess your business up. It's like the job turns them into morons! They miss work, they neglect vital processes, they make disappearing acts, they pocket things, they marry every week, they drift into unprofitable side-businesses at the cost of the core business. You give someone the simplest of tasks and they cannot pull it off. On the other hand, I have seen people who consistently pull off things even in the tightest of situations. If you could get just one thing and you become consistent with it!

4. Communication/Presentation: During one of the stiffest student contexts at MIT, a young innovator from Makerere made such a passionate pitch that the entire room turned to see what was going on. He presented like there was no tomorrow. He won the small innovation prize! During one of the interviews I participated in some months back, someone was selected because of a very straight forward pitch. You just have to be able to talk about your shit! Young people need to learn to present their case, concisely but impactfully. Unabashedly, not like a coquet. You have nothing to lose, why not kick ass so that even if they don't give you, they will never forget! The core message should be clear and well-articulated. The support points are vital because no body trusts your shit! Present well layered evidence, with numbers if possible. Be ready for an 'elevator pitch' (when the CEO runs into an elevator and all you have is the time the lift moves from the 1st to the 4th floor). PowerPoint presentations should be structured and do not read word for word. Engage the audience. Non-PowerPoint presentations lasting more than 5 minutes require a list of points. For important presentations, you must do practice runs (including in front of a mirror). Present like you have a freaking diaphragm - not like you have a large hernia and you fear to exert yourself lest it escapes through your pants. Have motivation and drive; not like you lost someone. Be pleasant. Un-learn fear by getting ways to cope with it. Speak briskly. Some people present at a rate of one word per 10 seconds – like the CD in their brain takes ages to load (low band-width)! You have to freaking present or perish! Communication also involves learning to negotiate: The skill of arriving at and reaching mutually beneficial understandings and agreements with a broad range of people internally and externally.

5. Creativity: During our wedding 10 years ago, a mysterious agent gave us a little but very uniquely designed tea pot. It's the present we keep talking about. The very sight of it made us take more and more tea. Creativity - the competency of conceiving and selecting innovative strategies and ideas for your organization – is lacking among many 'slow motion' youth and is a knock off. Because most human attributes follow a 'normal distribution' most people are very average and they can do the same exact shit that you do. However, you can learn to 'add value' by going the extra mile to accessorize your deliverables with small but pivotal additions. Occasionally accompany the report with 'a talking brief'. Change the sitting arrangement of the workshop. Create a new visualization tool or graphic. Some youth have to be constantly told what to do. Others are essentially brain-dead, not because they lack grey matter, but because they are hesitant to use their brains. Well in Medicine they teach us - any part of the body that is not utilized tends to shrink - that's why the Appendix lost its job!

6. Emotional intelligence/Maturity: The Basoga have a saying that if a person has bigger genitals than yours, do not go sulking that 'it is a hydrocele'. Emotional intelligence is the competency of understanding and mastering your own emotions and recognizing the emotions of others in a way that instils confidence, motivates, inspires, and enhances group effectiveness. Toxic, flippant, defiant attitudes make your skull impervious to sense and destroy the team. Mentors have a wealth of experience about what constitutes a distinctive performance and when they talk to you about what is needed, do not even for one-minute think they are overbearing. Its their turf! Young people need to be patient and open to learning. If you keep leaving every job just because people are telling your lazy-ass to measure up, you will end up an extremely mediocre person. You also have to learn to reduce negativity, toxic rumor-mongering and hen-pecking your colleagues.

7. Focused Drive: The competency of focusing on a goal and harnessing your energy in order to meet that goal – a balance between the components of: (1) Focus - The ability to identify an important goal or vision and to channel efforts at specific targets that support that goal or vision. (2) Drive: The ability to persevere, sacrifice (when necessary), and expend high degrees of energy to reach high levels of performance. Young people are losing focus, with increasingly scattered agendas Focused drive involves looking at the big picture, and where one wants to be in 10 years. It involves finishing what you started – complete the degree; complete the house; make decisions regarding relationships.

8. Patience/Resilience: Rome was not built in one day, stupid! You cannot seek to create a real estate empire in 2 years. Young people are increasingly seeking immediate gratification, leading to corruption, pilferage, scheming; the ‘get rich attitude un-anchored by real talent’ is a disease that is getting more genetically perverse among our youth. One cataclysmic event should not decimate your resolve to thrive - when you fall, even if you do so a dozen times, pick your ass up, learn and move on. Do not tie onto relationships/projects/visions, that have terminally failed.

9. Financial intelligence: Many youths of today do not have fiscal discipline. Expenditure is hand-to-stomach, even when there is extra income. You buy a 60-inch plasma screen in a 70-inch studio apartment – the Principle Focus of the curved screen is behind the wall of your tiny wee apartment. The disease of borrowing to buy things like TVs and sofa-sets. Then the disease of ‘oniomania’ - the uncontrolled urge to buy stuff. Then the disease of showing off and wanting to ‘impress’ peers. There is no clear substitute to saving in an economy that is as uncertain as ours. Saving should be a must when you have a windfall. The amount of money needed to break free from lurking poverty is not small. You cannot borrow 100% of the funds needed to start a business – you need to kickstart the freaking enterprise and borrowing should be for expansion.

10. Reverence/Decency: Honor your father and mother; look after your parents. Never ever discount the role of blessings in a person’s success and how blessings can run away from selfish narcissistic people. The little science you have read about matter and the big-bang should never turn you into a snob – we are not anywhere near understanding the vast quantity of the forces that drive the universe and there-in lie the blessings that come from being humble and respectful.

As for those of us 40 years and above, I have no advice. Our kind is already irredeemably hardwired in our stupidities.

1st nov 2020

I think we have lived long enough in a culture where people's confidence in themselves is systematically decimated from childhood that by the time they make it as adults; they are so exhausted and broken and just want to live and wait to pass on quietly.

As a society we don't evaluate how much we lose because people were not given a chance to apply themselves optimally.

I silently defied negative talk since I was little.

While I listened attentively to those making their wild projections about my future , my intention was always to quietly question their motive and to reverse engineer their crooked projections. Deep inside, my late mother had planted a good seed that could germinate anywhere and I not only believed her vibe, I also felt it deep inside. She had spoken words of encouragement into my young soul in the toughest of times. All I had to do is work the system no matter how broken to have the seed germinate and blossom on whatever ground it landed on.

I have had my fair share of doubters and empathizers. And I can tell you, all have been right in their own way. But here we are ladies and gentlemen. I hold no grudge with society.

My philosophy is that everybody alive deserves their voice to be heard and an opportunity to apply themselves optimally. We all don't have to be super intelligent, talented or whatever fancy notion society attaches to the importance of the individual to be listened to and respected.

Everybody is in their own struggle trying hard to find meaning in their individual lives and the best we can do is to be understanding that we don't know how rough their road or exhausting their journey has been to be where they are today no matter how relatively imperfect.

I have faced the fear of failure and challenged myself not to give up knowing my dreams have others after me who would feel let down if I gave up on myself. So I knew all along my dreams are not mine alone but shared. People are going to insult you or be mean to you when they know nothing about you and the choice to let your feelings get hurt by those throwing bottles at you is yours. Some people are not going to give you a chance. Some folks are going to treat you badly, and that is life. But there are also going to be a few good samaritan's who will find you bleeding by the road side and will pick you up so you can live to fight another day. Listen folks, you don't have to be a super genius or talented to be worth some respect. You don't have to come from a rich background. Your father's name does not have to matter. All you have to do is not give up and not look down upon yourself in shame that things are not working as well as your neighbor. Giving up on oneself is the easier option but comes with a high premium over ones entire life. You have to focus your mind on believing in yourself and figuring out what you actually want and work on that. Treat the rest including flying debris or bottles in your direction as just background noise. The results of your courage not to give up on self will be worth every blow and pang you took in later in life.

So Muhoozi Kainerugaba is ordering militia forces to break skulls and knee cap the ambitions of other Presidential candidates to help his old father rig his 10th sham election.

But why would an educated person or group of persons resent or fear fair competition so much in this poor country? There is no justification for violence unless one is not adequately equipped intellectually to articulate ones agenda persuasively. Infact Muhoozi's father should not even be campaigning or printing a single poster because his achievements of 35 years in power should be obvious to even a child in Kindergarten.

If his father now has to hide behind his son abusing the security militia groups to cripple the ambitions of other young people, then the old man admits he has no record to stand on his own. Mind you, the very young people Muhoozi has turned his wrath on for no legitimate purpose are children of former peasants who supported his father in the 1980s while Muhoozi was safely hiding away from violence in exile in Sweden.

Yes, unknown to many, this same Muhoozi was safely in hiding in Sweden while Ugandans were subjected to the same political state sponsored violence by others and he is recycling an old tool that will eventually crack.

Muhoozi has been fed, educated, housed, dressed, entertained for all his entire life by hard working Ugandan tax payers including farmers, petty traders, grave diggers who have paid taxes religiously to sustain the privilege he now assumes to be his birth right. Yes, Ugandans even paid his dowery to find a wife and paid for the wedding in full including all the shoes and socks he's worn even today. If he was cultured enough, he could only be grateful and serve with humility. But paying them with violence is something else. The aging father has dominated Ugandans by violence, now his son wants to extend the culture of violence like it's some form of hereditary sub-culture passed on from one generation to another.

As an individual with some degree of formal education with his corterie of enablers , it would be important to raise above this native culture and upgrade from the level of his father who has relied on violence as means of achieving any political objective. That is what social mobility is all about. If your grandfather was a nomad, you don't aspire to be a nomad. You go one level above by adding some value to your generation. If your father was a village wrestler, you go be a tax driver or something better. It is unfortunate that M7 seems to have no achievements of his own to stand on and champion his clumsy agenda but has to rely on a myriad of militias under the patronage of his friends and family to unleash violence against unarmed legitimate political adversaries some of whom are children of his former peasant supporters who brought him to Kampala 35 years ago.

Uganda does not need any more violence. But if those in charge think it's the only option in their tool box to contain a growing population of disgruntled poor youths who see no opportunity without change, then the country of 45 million poor will have to continue to put up with the relentless build up of social unrest with or without M7 into the foreseeable future until such a time when the monolithic choice of violence becomes less motivating to everyone.

To Muhoozi Kainerugaba calculus, his father's ambition to remain President of poor Uganda is war against those who aspire to challenge him under the very mutilated Constitution; the father, the son, the mother, the uncles, the cousins pretend to run the country to maintain their conjured up pseudo-monarchy.

This opinion is not intended to denigrate the man in Muhoozi Kainerugaba but to motivate him to manage and tame his inflated ego and start accepting that Ugandans deserve to be treated well in their country.

On 12/11/2019, I wrote one of my musings below and looks the Oracle of Kabulasoke still thinks this is relevant today. This was before COVID-19 struck through the global system.

If you thought the Economic situation is dire today when we are barely 42 million poor, you have not seen just yet. Wait when Uganda approaches 100 million in the next 25 years with this culture of clan-based thinking by our would be strategic planners.

If you can't find a job today when the world population is approximately 7.5 billion, your situation or that of your children might even be murkier than when the global population sprints towards 10 billion by 2050, a feat just 30 years from today.

Uganda's land mass is approximately 90,000sq miles compared to the 100,000sq miles for the state of Colorado for illustration. Now unless Uganda annexes a piece of Rwanda, Congo or S.Sudan by invoking some imperial ambitions, it's land resources are not scalable with the exception of intensive & extensive mechanized production. It's human resources will have to be well socially engineered to provide skilled labor to industries nationally, regionally and in global markets. Additionally, the comparative GDP per capita for each of Uganda's 42 million people stands at a paltry $600 relative to $52,000 for each of Colorado's 5.6 million people which further shows we have to take people to work, invest tax shillings to further enable mass production for both domestic and external markets to improve the quality of people. While Uganda's population is projected to rise to 53 million by 2025, Colorado's is projected to grow by a paltry 2.2million people by 2040. By the way, this population control is policy driven. People put demands on public infrastructure and the environment and Governments need to ensure the people are productive, pay taxes so the government can plan and provide social and public service for people to realize an improvement in the quality over their life time rather than live like animals.

To put this in context, if your son or daughter is 4 years today they will be 24 years when Uganda's population is approximately 80m and global population approximately 8.8 billion in 2040 just about 20 years from today.

You might be thinking. "Well, I will be old and retired to the village eating cassava and wild rats to worry about the noise and hustle in Kampala or some township that has come up"

I think we need to strategically plan better by putting in place the right building blocks for the future generations as we also prepare for our inevitable retirement.

I have seen poor old people in villages and suburbs of Kampala languishing in poverty and it's not because they were not once young and vibrant like most people are today. They were and life was much easier and resources more accessible than they will ever be in the future.

1- Equip young people with on demand skills that are transferable across industries and global markets through deliberate and strategic investment in education.

2- Roll out policies that encourage and foster industrial production to optimize our meager resources.

3- Reform the structure of government to be leaner and more efficient in the delivery of public goods and services to assure optimal utility of public resources.

4- Socially engineer society by establishing good laws and ensure they are punitively, equitably and consistently applied without exception.

There is no other way of dodging the bullet. If you are relatively productive today, there are parents living in pain as they watch their children's lives wasting away for lack of jobs.

Let me go take a drink.

More later.

A man or woman graciously walks out of the ghetto or village, earns international fame with strong name recognition nationally; not by gambling, spilling blood of others or winning a lottery but working very diligently & political sour grapers and arm chair “analysts”, most of them recent arrivists from Kamonkoli, Kiruhura, Kyenjojo, Busanza-Gisoro, Paya, Magodesi, Mukujju, Kabunyatta, Zirobwe to Kampala start throwing all garbage at him.

Yes, some of you came to Kampala just recently as some of us retreated back to our villages and it's one of your greatest achievements but you diss hard climbers like you brought the first bricks that built the foundation of “little” Kampala.

The “why him/her and NOT me” mentality must be objective to drive you to compete with others positively rather than gutting your system with abnormal energy against those history has chosen to be great despite the odds against them.

Some of us our only proximity to fame is going to stop at having attended the best schools, writing and speaking good English which amounts to little unless we break traditional barricades of working for government as humble civil servants or some corporation in Kampala. Quite honestly, these amount to very little compared to the innate potential we never exploited when we had our chance. We chose to settle for a corporate or civil service job as our best shot. Others will choose theirs too. And this could be reason we are gutted by high climbers from the gheto or some remote village. Let everyone get their chance to throw their best shot at life. Let people aspire. Let people dream unencumbered. Abantu mubaleke baloteko nabo irrespective of their percieved imperfections for their aspirations.

Like I have said before, it is possible for anyone to walk out of the village, slum, ghetto, some remote place and go straight on top of the mountain. The ghetto, slum, village is not a permanent “prison” or “station” for malcontents but people whose time or opportunity has just not yet come.

Stop feeling bad for people who put in their time to go far up the top. Those who thought the mountain is exclusively for them alone, please accept the new comers as potential customers or service providers as some of you soon will start descending down to the ghetto or back to your village because it is a dynamic economic equilibrium of many variables. Staying on top of the mountain is hard work just like climbing up to the top from the ghetto. So kudos to the kid who walks out of the ghetto or that remote village and shows up for the hard job.

I am for all young men and women willing and ready to give life their best shot.

Stop “NUGUSI” now and learn to wish others well especially when you know how hard and genuinely they have found their way to the top.

Like my grandmother would say “Some of you have small & fragile hearts”.

Stop HOLDING DOWN people. Celebrate those among you who overcome what a majority think is insurmountable as a source of inspiration for others still down the bottom.

MWAGALIZE BANAMWE, OMUKAMA
NAMWE ABAKWATILEKO.

Tyrants have ENABLERS who soothe their ego in exchange for "temporary" relief because to the enablers, the immediate need for survival is the key motivation which gradually transforms them as part of the tyranny by association.

I have detected bullies from a distance all my life and made a decision not to give them the attention they crave for to validate their masked inner demons. They have a hole or void inside their soul they want filled by trampling over everyone around them perceived weak.

In my village when I was little was a giant called BEN GAYITANI who was known for walking into a village bar and the night would not end if he did not beat up someone to pulp. He was the village giant. The beater of people most times for no good reason except that he was physically stronger than any of them. Little as I was I noticed people "befriend" him and in my conclusion was that this was an attempt to soften him as security mechanism by boosting his ego.

GAYITANI was even feared by the Parish Chief who was the principle tax collector sometimes using him as enforcer. Little as I was then in early 1980s, I concluded this was the native culture of village tyrants a trait that is carried over in schools and eventually into our toxic politics of blood and iron. There is a native culture among Africans that has no regard for human dignity especially when tempted with the trappings of power. A culture where things have to be resolved natively in the public square; through physical brawls in which the strong must survive and the weak must submit or die.

Of course Mr. Gayitani did not live long. After the NRA war in Luwero in 1986, everyone in the ravaged village was asking in whispers where Ben the tall giant was and no one to-date knows where the long bones of the former tall giant are resting with the exception of speculation he was unlucky in the war.

Power manifests itself in many ways in this context. You could be the village giant. You could be a police man, a soldier, a teacher, pastor , MP, Minister whatever your station you occupy that gives one some latitude of power over others and often people are overwhelmed by that power, abusing it by violating others just for self gratification & a sense of control.

There is nothing good in enabling tyranny. The temporary relief one obtains most of the time is in exchange for ones pride, dignity; doing or defending tyranny against ones conscience.

As I grow older I seem to understand the psychology or the cause-effect logic of tyranny even better. We are a society of broken people who are more motivated by breaking those we perceive weaker than we are than protecting and supporting them.

I may not be powerful enough to protect everyone but I refuse to share a table with tyranny or associate with people who promote it, encourage it, enable it consciously or otherwise.

All my educated former friends who are active promoters and enablers of tyranny for their KAWOGGO know that I cut off contact because I concluded we no longer shared the same values. They are broken too and can't be fixed except by nature.

There are many intelligent people possibly including yourself who are not running for public office because politics has been turned into an ugly village food fight in which one must kill or disable the adversary in order for the victor to survive. This is typical animal behavior we have evolved our society into.

Some of the educated people who would moderate our political discourse are struggling with residual native culture. Others have concluded that Uganda cannot be fixed in their time so they have resigned to their relative comfort and handed over the baton to those who they perceive to have nothing to lose.

I don't have to support or to agree on anything or everything with Bobi Wine, Mao, Katumba, Mutumba, Amuriat or Tumukunde in order for me to accord them my respect for their bold choices to run for President. These are serious sacrifices from each one of these men and women to stand up and dare to aspire for such a serious responsibility. It is actually virtuous to have AMBITION and I think every person with ambition must be supported by any well meaning human being.

So for me it is quite mind boggling that in 2020, educated people including some I shared school classrooms or debate podiums with back in the days still have the appetite to ridicule, demonize and criminalize their fellow citizens who are bold enough to stand up for a legitimate and ambitious cause of assuming leadership roles of a very poor country inspired to lead it to greatness in the process motivating many of their followers who aspire for better.

I don't think this is civilized politics to curtail competition or knee cap those with ambition. It is the reason we are a poor country. We think those who aspire for greatness must be killed, their skulls broken or their businesses hamstrung to cripple their abilities and livelihood so they go back to where the rest of the country is being held hostage.

The civilized thing would be to allow free and fair competition in our politics so the people decide who must govern them. After 35 years one of the candidates does not even need a poster since the individual and his enablers (1) seem to have some name recognition albeit for the wrong reasons (2) assume to have achievements to speak for them. Let the others who aspire to lead also freely go talk their agenda to the masses for the people to freely come to their own conclusion on who must govern them.

By the way, I have tested the sweetness of fair competition and I know how possible it is to achieve greatness because you played by the rules and won so big that even the losers look at you in awe and respect.

Ladies in gentlemen, it is still possible to live a life of honor and respect because you did not have to kill or cripple others for you to survive. The alternative is the "LAW OF THE JUNGLE". How does one choose to live ones entire life like an ANIMAL that must kill all its competitors for prey to survive? Mzee Kabulasoke is a non-apologetic village ideologue.

So Mzee Museveni is the heir to Robert Gabriel Mugabe of Africa determined to die President of a poor Uganda!

It is evident though that Mr.Museveni, in the event he is incapacitated, wants to hand over power to his son, a one Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba. The unintended consequences of their motive is the continued three decade long political "sodomization" of Ugandans who want to remove the shackles of economic domination by this group of people and its aging patron.

In conflict with his self interest to continue enjoying the grandeur of the Presidency since his departure will most likely be "untimely" as goes the common saying; he keeps fidgeting moving his son from one place to another in some form of smoke screen strategic formation just in case the expected happened. But there is nothing unusually smart about his intentions and actions.

Like all despots who have pillaged their poor Countries, Mzee Museveni and those in his courtyard view Uganda as their personal estate and the people their shamba workers with neither privileges nor rights reason they treat them with disdain.

How else would you explain Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba, for example, holding two "sensitive" jobs amidst this toxic unemployment in the Country? This despite scores of unarmed youths perennially gunned down by armed militias under the Command of their proxies in the Uganda Police and SFC.

Even if the arguement was that Mr.Muhoozi would not draw a salary from the consolidated fund for the position of Senior Presidential Advisor Special Operations which is a remote proposition given the appetite for public money these folks have demonstrated over the years. That would render the role redundant since as SFC Commander, he should be able to execute both assignments and file reports to his father. Unfortunately, it is what it is. It is a father-son thing that even the alphabets of job titles disappears in the personal relationships yet we should be talking about the Country.

Why not one-man-one job to ensure another person occupies the other role if indeed it's of strategic value? By making him hold those two portfolios, Museveni is telling the Country like an estate owner and all those of us educated through his UPE program that ONLY his son is qualified at this moment to hold these two "sensitive" assignments because the old man knows these are just self serving roles.

Now there are Ugandans who command some relative benefits from this patronage system because to them there is no light at the end of the tunnel in their lifetime to find something worthwhile. They are unconsciously conscripted for lack of imagination of what another Uganda without Museveni would look like.

All autocrats world over live in constant paranoia and trust only their inner circle of household members to maintain their corrupt control of a state in captivity and among them sons, daughters, wives coopted into fictitious military or civilian roles as did the late Col.Muammar Gaddafi formerly of Libya, Mobutu Sese sseko formerly of Zaire, Robert Gabriel Mugabe formerly of Zimbabwe, Hosen Mubarak formerly of Egypt to mention but a few of the autocrats in our modern history.

The script is the same. It's a personal conflict between testing fate for more time enjoying the grandeur of power dominating a country and it's poor people and the reality of the brutality of our limited time. Museveni's peers are dropping off dead one by one; a risk that the wear and tear of nature cannot be ignored even by Museveni and his enablers. So as a back up tactic, they organize internally by placing trusted members of the family in strategic locations in the event the old man simply refuses to wake up one morning; a very serious likelihood. Of course, I want Museveni to wake up every morning in Rwakitura.

But these in-house schemes raise the political risk profile of a country because the autocrat and his family ignore and deliberately decimate all institutional guard rails that would mitigate the risk of the passing of their patron. Their actions are motivated by the desire to maintain power and by default reduce the risk of exposure of the ill-gotten wealth at the risk of plunging a country into years of grueling anarchy.

I am not writing this because I have anything personal against Me. Museveni and members of his family. I am motivated by a desire to see Uganda build publicly accountable institutions that apply the laws equitably, consistently and punitively to build a culture within the population that adhere and respect the law.

The culture of Musevenism now rooted in the country is one of lawlessness. All institutions suffer from political inertia because of years of molestation through nepotism, cronyism and out right political Tribalism which has been a hallmark of Mr. Museveni's corrupt government.

The police, judiciary, civil service, the UPDF and it's SFC militia are all a cocktail of Tribalism and nothing good can be borne out of institutions bedrocked in nepotism and tribalism a symptom now normalized in the psyche of Ugandans.

To dismantle this infrastructure will require reconstruction and social engineering in the population. Future Leaders will have to demotivate themselves and people from disrespecting the law. They will have to build institutions that enforce ethics and laws to which the leaders too must submit and are accountable.

The culture of Musevenism has given politicians a sense of false entitlement that you can do whatever you want as long as you have power while the people are rendered spectators. People now motivated to pursue power to exercise full control of their personal agenda because the current infrastructure gives whoever is President unlimited power to do what they please and the people? Broken and powerless!

This is not the Uganda I envisioned it would be in 2020. Ultimately, it is the duty of each Ugandan individually and collectively to figure out the future they want and work to fix the pillars that will deliver the Country they want including making those sacrifices that come with the work that has to be done.

Zimbabwe, despite Mugabe's passing just like Libya are still bleeding after the departure of those autocrats. Autocrats pay their enablers or handy men fairly well to entrench their system because; well man is wired to rationalize self interest. Autocrats dismantle institutions. They mutilate their national Constitutions at every bend and turn. They use the central bank like their personal vault. They kill their own people to keep power and those are the challenges that have to be reversed to build a new country of Laws. Laws which even leaders must submit and under which they must be held accountable.

That is how you insulate and protect the public from the deviant tendencies of the individual and do the people's work.

Mzee Kabulasoke.

First, you must motivate oneself to dream big amidst all the obstacles. Don't wait for others to motivate you. Let your hardships give you the initial sting because you want a better version of you and those who will rely on your dreams to build their own in future.

Second, you have to immerse oneself in the art of persistent discipline of keeping ones dream alive because you want to see them to fruition and your failure will impact others who will come after you.

Thirdly, don't ever under estimate the power of where you come from in giving you the necessary upthrust to navigate you to wherever you want to go.

From your humble village, at BAMUGOLODDE PRIMARY SCHOOL, you could wake up 25 years later as one of the Aeronautics or ROBOTICS Engineers at Boeing in Washington Seattle, or some other Big Corporation in Beijing, London, Melbourne or Johannesburg. You could also become the chief innovator in Kampala working the broken system to deliver that much needed broad social change.

In between are building blocks that require meticulous discipline of filtering the substance from the background noise. Yes, that village background, the experience from Tororo College, degree from Gulu University, Makerere or Kabale is as vital as the one you would get from the University in Tokyo or Washington DC. The difference is mental attitude, adaptability to cross-cultural environment, a work ethic aligned to the life long goals you have wired in your psyche.

Back in the days I heard former External Security Organization (ESO) Director General David Pulkol on Radio make a compelling argument thus "By the time a Karamajong walks out of the Mathenikos and finds himself in London School of Economics, he is not an ordinary Karamajong".

I was still in my youth then working for CDC in Tororo and constantly reworking my path to the next big phase. There was a discipline. There was a dream. There was a modesty aligned to the budding idea. It is very tempting to under value ones life experiences because we have been wired to falsely think our local knowledge systems are not applicable to global knowledge systems. Wrong. What you have learned is valuable in many situations. You just have to know when and where to apply oneself optimally and that knowledge will come very handy.

Train oneself to be adaptable. There are so many easy things which are attractive to everybody. While these may be important and rewarding enough to give you the relative comfort needed to stabilize, they should not dissuade you from the big dreams and goals that come with relatively harder effort.

Finally, overcome fear and develop a sense of self worth and market value so you can sell oneself better to potential customers as someone who can provide superior service value in your field of specialty. When you know what you bring to the market you know your value and can gauge how much respect you derive from the market.

Remember, the market is beyond your village. Like countries compete for global commodity markets so are individuals in exploring global labor markets. There may be regulatory limitations that may impede your ability to apply yourself in a particular field, be prepared to pivot through a path of least

Gradually it starting to sink in. The problems of the people won't recede by spilling their blood. Instead the work of the people has to be done with their consent, and their individual and collective cooperation around a shared national agenda.

This is a message to the people. There Is No Sacred Ground for the Conquered. When the Israelites were held in slavery in Egypt under harsh conditions, between them and the promised land was the mighty RED SEA to cross as the least of their problems. In the mix was the Pharaoh's might army of chariots.

They had to believe in the existence of a promised land just across the sea. They also had to have faith there was a way to overcome the obstacle of crossing the red sea and the intelligence network of the Pharoah's government. But above all, they had to get their lazy bones off the ground, gather intelligence, neutralize internal leakages and at the right timing move to the banks of the sea as a show of their faith and determination before any other divine intervention.

How they reached the promised land is a long story. But the lessons are many for those still in slavery in our modern history. There is no short cut to salvation. There is no inch to gain without the hard work and sacrifices. Increasingly, there is going to be despair. There is going to be pain. There is going to be fear. There are going to be moments of helplessness. Some people are going to give up along the way. But that is the way of the struggle. Every revolution must continuously renew its soul to remain true to the aspirations of the people.

The real hard work has to be done by the people themselves re-asserting their will and demanding accountability. They must develop a certain ambition beyond the daily bread and butter issues. The darkness of young people whose blood is being spilled is not new. We have spilled our people's blood for decades and the political & economic problems for which we have killed our own people have simply refused to go away. It means our solutions is not working.

There is a reason why people who were popular in 1996 now need to rely on the apparatus of the state to remotely win even a rigged sham election. People who were popular in 1996, now need to transport supporters to shore up their rallies or pay those around them for any grain of loyalty. Attrition; the gradual loss of appeal, strategic strength due to changing circumstances.

NRM just like the Roman Empire cannot pull any other rabbits out of its legendary underwear. It's strength now remains in state inspired violence, extra judicial executions against unarmed civilians, abductions of political opponents, illegal detention, torture of suspects, bribery of political opponents, concoction of frivolous charges against political opponents and civil society; all signs of a pseudo-monarchy in decline.

If the youths of 1970s and 1980s stood up and showed up against oppression imposed by the rulers of the 1970s and 1980s, so should the youths of today. I implore the young people whose future is being robbed, whose aspirations are being constrained to stand up and show up firmly and demand reforms just like the current rulers who were the youths of the 1980s did. Pick a side that best represents the aspirations of the future of Uganda you want and that is your side. Don't be neutral in times of oppression because then you are fuel to the status quo. Mzee Kabulasoke.

JANUARY 2nd 2021

BURGLARY, ABDUCTIONS, DETENTION, TORTURE, ASSASSINATIONS, EXTRA JUDICIAL EXECUTIONS ARE CLASSIFIED
"SPECIAL OPERATIONS" UNDER
MR.MUHOOZI KAINERUGABA

The so called "Special Operations" in the President's office under a one Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba and his assistant a one Mr. Stephen Othieno are the fulcrum of the spiraling state inspired violence against unarmed citizens in Uganda.

This kitchen office in State House is the AUTHOR & ARCHITECT of the current state of terror in Uganda to scare an increasingly agitated young population into submission and forceful cooperation with an unpopular political regime. While in the public domain and security circles, the office special operations is projected to provide some strategic national security value, in reality it's an auxiliary outfit with no public accountability to any one else including the President except its head, a one Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba and his support staff complete with classified budgets to funds its criminal activities against the citizens of Uganda. Orders from operatives of this office to heads of formal security agencies are perceived to come straight from Mr.Museveni because of Mr.Muhoozi's proximity to his father whose mental acuity has obviously waned due to the natural wear and tear of time.

Mr.Museveni is naturally acting out his evening days but evidently physically and mentally exhausted; and now remains a caricature of his former self and Mr.Muhoozi and those working for him and with him are taking advantage of the apparent vacuum to occasion unwarranted terror against unarmed citizens in the hope of keeping an agitated population contained at bay. So the common code of "ORDER FROM ABOVE" known for a while from enforcers of criminal activities among security personnel, is effectively executing orders from Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba and those working his lawless political agenda.

Like the disgraced former Inspector General of Police, Mr.Kale Kaihura who executed 90% of orders from Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba over a decade long campaign of brutality against Ugandans, most security agency heads are motivated to show loyalty to Mr.Museveni by unquestioningly carrying out known illegal orders from Mr.Muhoozi and his staff without any back office mechanism to verify their authenticity for fear of retribution.

And by default, in the eyes of the public and in diplomatic circles, Mr.Muhoozi is supposed to look stainless with no blood spots from all the blood letting since his orders are executed by gullible proxies such as STG. ELWELU who was at the scene of the extra judicial execution of more than 150 citizens during the Kasese massacre in the Rwenzururu Kingdom. Operating in the shadows of his portfolios, receiving reports from his proxies on the sanctioned brutal executions, abductions, illegal detentions and torture, Mr.Muhoozi is responsible for the wails of souls of hundreds of Ugandans who have lost their lives under his watch as Presidential Advisor on Special Operations.

On 09/9/2020, security personnel on the orders of Mr.Muhoozi broke into Nicholas Opiyo's home and stole his computers and other electronic gargets in the prism of their sanctioned special operations. The police with a search warrant obtained from any Court can search any property for material of evidential value. This is the normal and legal practice and it's done transparently with a paper trail or chain custody of material seized from a suspect. The assumption here is that a suspect is innocent until proven guilty and that the professional investigators are devoid of any bias towards the suspect and the suspect enjoys their benefit of doubt despite their motivation to unearth crime and prosecute the suspect to the fullest extent of the law.

Mr.Muhoozi and his assistants however operate on the doctrine that their target suspect is guilty of political crimes which carry greater punishment including death and have the power to abduct the suspect, break into his house and steal whatever material of interest and and are armed to kill a suspect at whatever time of their choosing. Read Mr.Museveni's crocodile tears about the assassination of Zebra Senyange.

This has been the pattern for almost 15 years and the orchestration is based on Mr.Muhoozi's increasing boldness and assumed power of life and death over Ugandans. Unbeknown to members of the public, he is one of the few active military officers ILLEGALLY allowed to make political statements that would otherwise result into court martial for other active duty officers under the UPDF Act. Lately, he even publicly makes veiled threats of violence or war against domestic political opponents of Mr.Museveni since he feels acting in the shadows for so long no longer provides him adequate coverage of his intentions. Lately, Mr.Muhoozi with no diplomatic decorum oscillates between threatening war with regional leaders and showering flattery praises; a sign of his of internal conflict of his calculations that his future political fortunes are encumbered by an increasingly growing domestic uprising and suspected hostile neighbors.

Recently Mr. John Kitobe,⁷² a retired lecturer at the Uganda Management Institute (UMI) and senior accountant whose public service career spanned more than 45 years was among scores of unarmed citizens shot dead by security forces while walking from Maberizi city complex. This was during demonstrations in the city center following the arrest of NUP Presidential candidate, Robert Kyagulanyi while addressing a rally at Luuka district headquarters. The Minister of Security; Mr. Elly Tumwiine, came out to affirm what I have written that security forces are indeed conducting extra judicial executions of unarmed civilians. Yesterday, Mr. Museveni again came out with an admission of the extra judicial execution of a one Zebra Senyange by his armed militia after breaking into the deceased's home in pitch darkness un announced.

While Mr. Museveni has habitually been calling widows whose slain husband's have been executed by his son, he is yet to reach out to the late Mr. John Kitobe's family as a show of some decorum. Mr. Kitobe survived Amin and Obote's rule which Mr. Museveni has choreographed as brutal in a career spanning decades only for Mr. Kitobe to succumb to an execution by Mr. Muhoozi's men. Those who have taken interest in the late Mr. John Kitobe's life have stated he was not only an academician, a family man but also non-political in his entire public life. The fact that he was killed by security forces and the President or any government official have not taken interest in checking on the family is a classic display of how uncouth and low this whole group have sank.

Additionally, scores of opposition supporters are being executed just for supporting their preferred political candidates in a Presidential Election provided for by the mutilated 1995 Museveni Constitution. Mr. Muhoozi and his team have no appetite even to take the liberty to read what is left of this mutilated Museveni Constitution. They operate as the law unto self. They instruct formal security organ heads to disobey court orders. They torture suspects in illegal detention with no restraint.

Mr. Museveni has sent envelopes to a few relatives of assassinated Ugandans by his son promising to investigate and inform the public. In 2018 during a Parliamentary by-election, Mr. Muhoozi personally ordered the execution of Mr. Yasin Kawuma, a former driver to now Presidential candidate commonly known as Bobi Wine. The initial intent of this operation was to intimidate a popular and increasingly ambitious young musician turned politician from contesting against Mr. Museveni and dent his Presidential ambitions then and in the future. The Uganda Police under the orders of Mr. Muhoozi, planted fictitious firearms and ammunitions in Bobi Wine's hotel room as "exhibits" to ensure the ambitious politician was effectively tried under military law in the court martial manned by active UPDF Officer's appointed by Mr. Museveni. Mr. Bobi Wine and 30 other opposition politicians were rounded up into illegal detention and tortured under military supervision. The charges did not merit any further court scrutiny as diplomatic pressure made known that these were politically motivated concoctions.

The initial plot was that if Bobi Wine could not be stopped by other means then a fictitious treason conviction could keep him in jail and run the clock down until diplomatic intervention put a full stop on the madness. It was the same play book attempted in 2005 to scare Rtd.Col.Dr.Kizza Besigye from returning from S.African to contest against Mr.Museveni. Next was to cripple Bobi Wine's every known source of income to suffocate his financial oxygen, exert more pressure on NGOs suspected of being conduits for donor funds financing his political activities. Effectively, Bobi Wine or any political opposition to Mr.Museveni had been criminalized and anyone caught in the web is in the prism of the assassins.

On 9/9/2020, Human Rights Lawyer/Defender Nicholas Opiyo reported a burglary into his house like many common night break-ins into NGO offices over the years including Action Aid among others. A few months later, he is abducted and detained with his friends beyond the mandatory 48 hours like they have done to so many others and dump them into illegal detention with a choreographed processes deliberately intended to remand the suspect in prison on frivolous charges that will never see the light of day in a court of law. If the suspect is a known frequent traveler, they will use court to withdraw his passport and also place the suspect on a "NO FLY LIST". The intent is not to enforce the law but to economically cripple an individual whose public opinions are perceived subversive to the regime's political thinking and whose source of livelihood they have no control over.

Withdrawing the passport is meant to curtail movement of the suspect, cripple source of income, constrain access to external contacts and put them under a web of constant harassment and degrade their degree of freedom through constant surveillance and where the target is perceived stubborn and uncooperative an assassination is ordered by Mr.Muhoozi.

There are many political assassinations no one has ever owned up to ranging from the various murders of vocal and prominent Muslim clerics, vocal Senior Police Officers including ASP Mohammad Kirumira, AIGP Andrew Felix Kaweesi, Major Muhammad Kiggundu and all extrajudicial executions of demonstrators from the Kayunga riots, Kasubi riots, Walk-to-Work which has been the hand work and authorship of this "SPECIAL OPERATIONS" Office under Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba.

Mr.Muhoozi Kainerugaba as a soldier would take much pride in confronting ARMED ENEMY COMBATANTS against his Country but alas, his pride is in assassinating unarmed Ugandans legally opposed to his father's political phylosophy. To Mr.Muhoozi, opposing his father and supporting his father's opponents is criminal in what is supposed to be a multiparty political dispensation. He can no longer hide his threats to his father's political opponents and now issues them with reckless abandon and the consequence is the constant blood letting we see everyday.

Given the proximity of the "SPECIAL OPERATIONS" docket to the President, it should have provided the public with a credible narrative of the rampant ABDUCTIONS, ILLEGAL DETENTION of suspects, past and present ASSASSINATIONS of citizens , EXTRA JUDICIAL KILLINGS of unarmed civilians around the country during demonstrations or opposition political rallies. While these are now official government policy, Mr.Museveni's job is to deny them, promise fake investigations or simply send envelops to poor widows and orphans because Mr.Muhoozi is the author and chief architect of these activities, classified "SPECIAL OPERATIONS", a fancy name that gives them some strategic cover from public and diplomatic scrutiny since they benefit the President and those who have taken the responsibility of ruling Uganda as a birth right rather than a privilege.

The admission of the extra judicial execution of a one Zebra Senyange by Mr.Museveni follows the same pattern with the assassination of ASP Muhammad Kirumira, AIGP Andrew Felix Kaweesi, Maj. Muhammad Kiggundu with Mr.Museveni coming to sanitize the assassinations with Mabuggo envelops, empty promises of investigations to families who have lost their loved ones which never see the light of day. Mr.Museveni cannot hold Mr.Muhoozi accountable for actions that politically benefit him personally. He is his son finishing off youths supporting his opponents anyway!

AIGP Andrew Felix Kaweesi was assassinated because of his suspected political ambitions. He had completed a doctorate in S.Africa, plotting a political career starting with MP for Lwengo just like Bobi Wine has done. He had built some national visibility through his work in the Uganda Police. The moment his political ambitions were leaked including Presidential ambitions in the future, he had to be stopped. The execution was meticulous and to date there is no official narrative of who did the assassinations except the poor moslem youths from Bwaise paraded in Court for TV cameras. ASP Muhammad Kirumira had complained of harassments within the Police force and was working the system to meet the President to make his appeal heard. He revealed his life was in danger and got no support until he met his eventual assassination. They did not like his boldness challenging the Police Leadership including the naked tribalism, nepotism and cronyism within the force which is a rallying political cry towards opposition politics. He had to be terminated to stop others disgruntled officers in security forces from following his approach. The police disciplinary system had already been tainted with bias and could not give Kirumira adequate punishment that would satisfy Mr. Muhoozi without turning Kirumira into a political hero. He had to be terminated permanently to send shock and awe to those who admired his bravery.

We shall break this down further in the coming days and the next course of action. First de-couple the entire Chain of Command of the current spate of State inspired violence and place responsibility on the door step of those at the Apex of the pyramid of Evil.
